Military Planes Are Alerted
To Probe Flying Objects"Saucer Reports"
Stir Entire U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6 (AP)—The Army Air Forces alerted jet and conventional fighter planes on the Pacific Coast today in hopes of chasing and explaining the mystery of the "flying saucers" which in 12 days has challenged the entire country.

Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Forces Commandant, was in the Pacific Northwest, where the majority of the strange objects were reported seen. An Air Forces spokesman in Washington said he had not gone there to investigate, but merely to make a speech at Seattle and for an airfield inspection today at Tacoma.

Ready For Take Off

A P-50 jet fighter at Muroc Army Air Field in California and six fast regular fighters at Portland, Ore., stood ready to take off on an instant's notice should any flying saucers be sighted in those areas. Some of the planes carried photographic equipment.

Louis E. Starr, national commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, told newsmen in Columbus, O., yesterday he understood Gen. Spaatz had a "group out right now" attempting to identify the discs.

A cautious attitude marked both official and scientific comments, but Capt. Tom Brown of the Air Force Public Relations Staff in Washington acknowledged that the air forces had decided "there's something to this" and had been checking up on it for ten days.

"And we still haven't the slightest idea what they (the discs) could be," he added.

First sighted June 25 and greeted generally with scornful laughs, the objects have been reported every day since by observers in 33 states. Most of the objects were reported seen July 4. A few were reported yesterday.

Competent observers such as airline pilots said they had seen the totally unexplained discs or saucers, larger than aircraft and flying in "loose formation" at high speed.

David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, said they had nothing to do with atomic experiments, and Army and Navy officials also entered positive disclaimers.

Captain Brown said the air forces were not making a formal investigation. Official interest, however, was no longer casual.

Doubt Guided Missile

"We don't believe anyone in this country, or outside this country, had developed a guided missile that will go 1200 miles an hour as some reports have indicated," said the Air Force Public Relations man.

Nova Hart, St. Louis mechanic who was trained during service in the war to spot all types of aircraft, said he saw one of the strange objects near Pattonville yesterday. It was flying at an altitude of 300 feet, he said. He described it as circular, with a ribbed framework and silver gray in color. He said it appeared to have a motor with a propeller attached in the center and it kept turning like an airplane doing a slow roll.

On Independence day 200 persons in one group and 60 in another saw them in Idaho. Hundreds of others in Oregon, Washington, and other Western States reported seeing them.

July 4 also brought first reports of the flying discs from east of the Mississippi. Since then they have been reported seen in widely separated sections of the country—in 33 states in all.

O'Connor Urges Tax
Reduction Measure

BALTIMORE, July 6 (AP)—Senator O'Connor (D-Md.) said today he "strongly urged enactment of a tax reduction bill now" and said available evidence indicated a treasury surplus could be expected in 1948 despite passage of the measure.

O'Connor was one of the Democratic Senators who voted for the original tax cut bill, which would have made reductions effective in July and which was vetoed by President Truman.

Another measure, with the effective date changed to January, is scheduled to be introduced in the House of Representatives Tuesday.

GIs Duped By Frauleins,
American Clergymen Say

BERLIN, July 6 (AP)—A Methodist bishop and a Jewish clergyman from the United States said today talks with United States Army Chaplains had convinced them the Army should ban marriages in Germany between American soldiers and German girls. In their view the GIs should wait at least until they return home.

Dr. Fred Pierce Corson, Methodist bishop of Philadelphia, said German girls often were using the GIs only to get "a meal ticket and entrance to the United States."

Rabbi James G. Heller of the Isaac M. Wise Temple at Cincinnati, said the German girls were a political danger because of their indoctrination to Nazism and should not be permitted to enter the United States "without years of fumigation."

Both men are with a group of prominent American clergymen touring Europe as guests of the War Department. They made their views known in interviews.

The Army lifted its ban of marriages between American soldiers and German girls last December. Practically the only reservation was that no marriages could take place just before the GI was leaving for home.

Flying Discs
Land, Wash.
Woman SaysLeave No Trace
After Dropping

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6 (AP)—Mysterious "flying saucers" were reported seen again today in various parts of the country and, at Spokane, Wash., a woman declared that 10 persons saw eight of the disc-shaped objects land near St. Maries, Idaho on July 3.

The phenomenon has been reported by hundreds of persons in at least 33 states since June 25. Descriptions vary, but generally the informants agree that the objects skimming through the skies are saucer-like discs.

As yet there has been no explanation tending to give the objects touch of earthly reality.

Travel at Extreme Speed

Mrs. Walter Johnson said at Spokane that the objects seen near St. Maries came into view at an extreme speed, going in a Northerly direction, suddenly slowed and then "flattened like leaves to the ground."

She said she and her companions could not find them afterward, nor any sign that they did anything to the timber into which they apparently fell. She said they were "about the size of a five-room house" and resembled wash tubs more than discs. The saucers appeared to be self-luminous because of their extreme brightness, she added.

An Oregon National Guard officer said aerial patrols today were unsuccessful in sighting any of the objects, but that any plausible reports would be checked quickly by plane henceforth.

The discs were reported today to have been seen at Chicago over Lake Michigan, in Southwestern Ontario, in Wisconsin and Minnesota, and in Maryland.

A Hagerstown, Md., woman said she saw five traveling eastward in formation at "terrific speed." She said they "roared" with a sound like a faraway train. They were flat, like saucers, with something on the back end. They were about the size of airplanes but definitely were not planes.

A report of a "saucer" seen over the District of Columbia came tonight from Hazen Kennedy, former AAF flying cadet. He said he saw it about 8:40 p. m. (EDT) through a window of his home, thought at first it was a reflection on the glass, and raised the window for an unobstructed look.

He described the object as flying about 1,200 to 1,500 feet up at "well over 1,000 miles an hour." He said it was of an orange hue. After a short time it just "disappeared," he recounted.

Maj. Gen. C. E. Le May, assistant chief of Air Staff for Research and Development, told a reporter he believed the nationally-reported phenomena are "nothing to worry about."

President Drives
Auto To Capital

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—President Truman returned to Washington today after a weekend at Charlottesville, Va., personally driving a black convertible automobile the 117 miles.

Mr. Truman surrendered the wheel of the car as the Presidential procession arrived at the Virginia side of the Memorial Bridge entrance into Washington.

As the procession reached the bridge, the President got out of the car to thank the Virginia State Police traffic officers who drove the "lead" car from the Virginia home of Stanley Woodward, State Department Protocol Officer, who was his weekend host.

Mr. Truman arrived at the White House at 11:15 a. m. (EST). The trip required two hours and 45 minutes.

The President went to Charlottesville Thursday afternoon to address an Independence Day celebration at Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson.

Flooded Mississippi
Begins Slow Fall

CHESTER, Ill., July 6 (AP)—The flooded Mississippi fell slowly between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau, Mo., today and United States Army Engineers said the outlook all along the stream was much brighter, although stages generally were still far above flood level.

The river at St. Louis dropped to 39.1 feet exactly a week after it passed that stage while climbing to a 40.3 reading, highest since 1844. A continued steady fall was predicted for the next 48 hours. At Cairo, Ill., 150 miles south, the Mississippi reached 43.8 and continued to rise, but the crest was reported near that point.

47-Day-Old Strike
With Ford MotorsRecommendation Is Approved 10 To 1

DETROIT, July 6 (AP)—The Foreman's Association of America (Ind.) called off its strike against the Ford Motor Company, today, Patrick Mullin, local board president announced.

At a mass meeting attended by 3,200 of the 3,800 unionized foremen employed by Ford, a board recommendation to end the 47-day-old strike was approved by a 10 to 1 ratio, he said.

Mullin said the board's recommendation was drawn up at a meeting this morning and approved without discussion by the membership shortly before noon.

Both Members Agree

He said it was agreed by both board members and the rank-and-file that the "stalemate" was only serving to exaggerate the differences between company and union.

"We'll carry on the fight in another manner now," he said, "in the form of a court test against the Taft-Hartley Labor Law." The Act relieves employers of any obligation to bargain with foremen.

The FAA struck May 21 against Ford's Rouge, Highland Park and Lincoln Plants in a dispute over a new contract in which the union demanded exclusive bargaining rights for company foremen.

With the strike ended as of noon today, Mullin said the men would return to their jobs Monday.

He said the board's recommendation was based on the conclusion the lengthy stoppage "was doing the members no good."

The FAA currently awaited a CIO-United Auto Workers decision on its request that the big auto company respect its picket lines around the Ford plants, which would have added 85,000 production workers. The decision was due Wednesday.

Coinciding with the request to UAW, FAA officials announced the intention of affiliating with some larger national union.

Recognition Withdrawn

Last week the company withdrew its recognition of the foremen's union.

In a letter to Robert H. Keys, PAA president, Ford Vice President John Bugas said the company had concluded that "management unions are unsound in principle and unworkable in practice."

Informed of the foremen's decision to end the strike, Bugas said "we are very happy" to have our foremen back with us.

Earlier, the Ford official had promised there would be no discrimination against returning foremen.

The effectiveness of the strike was pared in recent weeks by the return to work of some of the striking foremen. Mullin agreed with recent company announcements that as many as a quarter of the strikers had gone back to their jobs.

Income Tax Cutting Bill
May Go Back To TrumanHouse Passage Is Expected Tuesday

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—The Income Tax Reduction Bill may be back on President Truman's desk again before the week is over.

Republicans driving to push it through Congress drew encouragement today that it may not encounter time killing debate in the Senate.

It will come up first in the House where quick passage is expected Tuesday.

The measure would lop $400,000,000 off the annual tax bills of individuals beginning January 1. It is the same bill vetoed last month by President Truman except the effective date was changed from July 1. He has not made known his attitude toward the rejuvenated legislation.

Also on the Senate schedule this week is a bill to unify the Armed Forces and its backers hope for approval by Wednesday. Debate starts tomorrow. It has not passed the House.

In the House, Chairman Knutson (R-Minn.) of the Ways and Means Committee, will ask the Rules Committee tomorrow to approve a rule by which the House would bar amendments in considering the tax bill. It is expected to do so.

While Senator McClellan (D-Ark.) and others have said they will fight to amend the proposal, the threat of lengthy debate which might delay its passage and hold up the scheduled adjournment of Congress July 26 was lessened by an announcement of Senator Taylor (D-Idaho) that he has no plans to attempt to talk the bill to death.

McClellan and his associates are not expected to be turned off by course by a letter written by Chairman Knutson (R-Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee to Senator Byrd (D-Va.) promising action in January on community property legislation.

Knutson said in the letter that it would be "most unfortunate" if Congress acted "hastily on this matter before we found an adequate solution."

McClellan insisted, however, that it was an adequate solution to make it possible for husband and wives in all the states—not just the 10 where the practice now is legal—to split their income and take advantage of lower federal rates.

Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.) said in a talk for broadcast that the tax bill "would have given the workers the crumbs while the higher-income groups enjoyed the steak."

Some Congress members still are trying to revive the issue, he asserted, "to help their heavy party contributors."

Elevated To Sainthood

VATICAN CITY, July 6 (AP)—Two natives of France, Elizabeth Bichier Des Ages and Michel Carriols, were elevated to sainthood today by Pope Pius XII at St. Peter's for their holy works in the 19th Century.

The French Foreign Ministry, meanwhile, denied categorically statements in the Moscow newspaper Pravda that Britain and France had issued invitations to 22 nations for the July 12 meeting before the end of the meeting here last week with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

A spokesman said the invitations were drafted by French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin the morning after Molotov rejected the final British-French proposal.

The spokesman said the Pravda report was "absolutely false."

Split In EuropeWorkers Lashed Into Greater Production

PARIS, July 6 (AP)—French diplomats made no attempt tonight to hide their concern at the threat of Europe splitting into hostile camps over the Marshall Aid-Europe proposal, but stressed anew that the door remained open for Soviet participation.

They clung to their stand that the Marshall program offered Europe a unique opportunity to overcome the divisions and quarrels which have plagued the continent for centuries, and continued plans for the conference of participating nations opening here next Saturday.

11 Nations To Attend

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said 11 nations had indicated unofficially their intention to take part. They include Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Portugal, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium, Greece, Iceland and Turkey.

Representatives of the three Scandinavian countries will meet Wednesday in Copenhagen to determine their joint policy. It was reported here that Sweden would press for political reservations, in view of her geographical position next to the Soviet orbit.

Unofficial word from Finland was that she would reject the invitation unless the Russian attitude changed. Both the British and French have asked the Soviets to reconsider their refusal to participate in the plan to establish machinery for economic mutual assistance prior to requesting American financial aid.

French Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier told the Socialist National Party Council that the Marshall proposal was "the only way to organize the economy of Europe. We must take the lead, together with England, in European reconstruction."

Boy Missing
58-Hours Is Found Asleep

BIG BEAR, Calif., July 6 (AP)—Three-year-old Wayne Bowers, object of an intensive 58-hour search in this mountain resort area, was found today, asleep after a long and clutching his pink plastic drinking cup, in Sand Canyon, four miles from his parents' cabin.

The boy, son of Marine Master Sgt. and Mrs. Claude M. Bowers, was reported slightly scratched and with swollen lips, but said Sheriff's Deputy Dan Withrow, otherwise appeared "all right."

He was taken immediately to the Marine Recreation Camp, from which he apparently had wandered Friday morning, and a Navy physician administered saline solutions and ordered the boy to the emergency hospital at Big Bear Lake. His condition was described as "fairly good."

The blond, blue-eyed toddler was found by one of some 150 Marines who joined with about 40 San Bernardino County Sheriff's officers and more than 100 others in the exhaustive two-day search.

He was located at 4:35 p. m. (PT) in a brush and boulder strewn area that had been covered by searchers yesterday but was re-examined this afternoon at the request of Sheriff James W. Stocker.

The child, who came to this mile-high retreat with his parents from their home at the Marine base at Barstow, Calif., had been feared kidnapped at one stage of the search when bloodhounds lost his trail at a highway. Earlier today, however, tracks were found on Moon Ridge, near Sand Canyon.

Little Wayne came with his parents Thursday night to the recreation camp, a quarter mile south of Big Bear City.

Representatives of the three Scandinavian countries will meet Wednesday in Copenhagen to determine their joint policy. It was reported here that Sweden would press for political reservations, in view of her geographical position next to the Soviet orbit.

Unofficial word from Finland was that she would reject the invitation unless the Russian attitude changed. Plan Flayed
By SenatorTerms Marshall's
Outline 'New Deal'

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—Senator Revercomb (R-W.Va.) today criticized the "Marshall Plan" as a "new deal for the countries of Europe" that might cost the United States from 18 to 24 billion dollars.

"You cannot buy friendships—you cannot buy peace," the West Virginia Republican said in a speech transcribed for broadcast later in West Virginia.

Rejected By Russia

The plan, advanced by Secretary of State Marshall, calls for the building up of an integrated European economy on a basis of self-help United States financial aid. It has been rejected by Russia.

Revercomb contended that the foreign policy of the United States "has suddenly changed" from support of the United Nations to the "new plan of America to go it alone."

"The time has come when we must settle upon a policy," he said. "We want to aid other countries and other people, but that help must be within the bounds of our ability to help without injuring our own strength, and it must be upon a basis of help to those who do not hold the threat of war for us."

Revercomb disputed arguments that the United Nations "was not ready to take over the burden of peace-making" or that Russia's use of veto power against United Nations action compelled the new United States policy.

He said that the U. N. was able to force "Russia to withdraw her force from Iran." He proposed: "If Russia indeed was going to use the veto without reason, then let those who stood against Russia repudiate her and act against her. Then the United States would not stand alone."

"Would Imperish U.S."

The Marshall Plan, Revercomb continued, "calls for appropriation and expending of vast sums of money, not particularly to feed people in need, not to shelter them or to clothe them, but to sustain governments."

President Drives Auto To Capital

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—President Truman returned to Washington today after a weekend at Charlottesville, Va., personally driving a black convertible automobile the 117 miles.

Mr. Truman surrendered the wheel of the car as the Presidential procession arrived at the Virginia side of the Memorial Bridge entrance into Washington.

As the procession reached the bridge the President got out of the car to thank the Virginia State Police traffic officers who drove the "lead" car from the Virginia home of Stanley Woodward, State Department Protocol Officer, who was his weekend host.

Mr. Truman arrived at the White House at 11:15 a. m. (EST). The trip required two hours and 45 minutes.

The President went to Charlottesville Thursday afternoon to address an Independence Day celebration at Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson.

Foremen Call Off 47-Day-Old Strike With Ford Motors

Recommendation Is Approved 10 To 1

DETROIT, July 6 (AP)—The Foreman's Association of America (Ind.) called off its strike against the Ford Motor Company, today, Patrick Mullin, local board president announced.

At a mass meeting attended by 3,200 of the 3,800 unionized foremen employed by Ford, a board recommendation to end the 47-day-old strike was approved by a 10 to 1 ratio, he said.

Mullin said the board's recommendation was based on the 47-day-old meeting this morning and approved without discussion by the membership shortly before noon.

Both Members Agree

He said it was agreed by both board members and the rank-and-file that the "stalemate" was only serving to exaggerate the differences between company and union.

"We'll carry on the fight in another manner now," he said, "in the form of a court test against the Taft-Hartley Labor Law." The Act relieves employers of any obligation to bargain with foremen.

The FAA struck May 21 against Ford's Rouge, Highland Park and Lincoln Plants in a dispute over a new contract in which the union demanded exclusive bargaining rights for company foremen.

With the strike ended as of noon today, Mullin said the men would return to their jobs Monday.

He said the board's recommendation was based on the conclusion the lengthy stoppage "was doing the members no good."

The FAA currently awaited a CIO-United Auto Workers decision on its request that the big auto union respect its picket lines around the Ford plants, which would have ended 85,000 production workers. The decision was due Wednesday.

Coincident with the request to the UAW, FAA officials announced the intention of affiliating with some larger national union.

Recognition Withdrawn

Last week the company withdrew its recognition of the foremen's union.

In a letter to Robert H. Keys, PAA president, Ford Vice President John Bugas said the company had concluded that "management unions are unsound in principle and unworkable in practice."

Informed of the foremen's decision to end the strike, Bugas said, "we are very happy to have our foremen back with us."

Earlier, the Ford official had promised there would be no discrimination against returning foremen.

The effectiveness of the strike was pared in recent weeks by the return to work of some of the striking foremen. Mullin agreed with recent company announcements that as many as a quarter of the strikers had gone back to their jobs.

Income Tax Cutting Bill May Go Back To Truman

House Passage Is Expected Tuesday

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—The Income Tax Reduction Bill may be back on President Truman's desk again before the week is over.

Republicans driving to push it through Congress drew encouragement today that it may not encounter time killing debate in the Senate.

It will come up first in the House where quick passage is expected Tuesday.

The measure would lop $400,000,000 off the annual tax bills of individuals beginning January 1. It is the same bill voted last month by President Truman except the effective date was changed from July 1. He has not made known his attitude toward the rejuvenated legislation.

Also on the Senate schedule this week is a bill to unify the Armed Forces and its backers hope for approval by Wednesday. Debate starts tomorrow. It has not passed the House.

In the House, Chairman Knutson (R-Minn.) of the Ways and Means Committee, will ask the Rules Committee tomorrow to approve a rule by which the House would bar amendments in considering the tax bill. It is expected to do so.

While Senator McClellan (D-Ark.) and others have said they will fight to amend the proposal, the threat of lengthy debate which might delay its passage and hold up the scheduled adjournment of Congress July 26 was lessened by an announcement of Senator Taylor (D-Idaho) that he has no plans to attempt to talk the bill to death.

McClellan and his associates are not expected to be turned off their course by a letter written by Chairman Knutson (R-Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee to Senator Byrd (D-Va.) promising action in January on community property legislation.

Knutson said in the letter that it would be "most unfortunate" if Congress acted "hastily on this matter before we found an adequate solution."

McClellan insisted, however, that it will be an adequate solution to make it possible for husband and wives in all the states—not just the 10 where the practice now is legal—to split their income and take advantage of lower federal rates.

Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.) said in a talk for broadcast that the tax bill "would have given the workers the crumbs while the higher income groups enjoyed the steak."

Some Congress members still are trying to revive the issue, he asserted, "to help their heavy party contributors."

Boy Missing 58-Hours Is Found Asleep

BIG BEAR, Calif., July 6 (AP)—Three-year-old Wayne Bowers, object of an intensive 58-hour search in this mountain resort area, was found today, asleep against a log and clutching his pink plastic drinking cup, in Sand Canyon, four miles from his parents' cabin.

The boy, son of Marine Master Sgt. and Mrs. Claude M. Bowers, was reported slightly scratched and with swollen lips, but said Sheriff's Deputy Dan Withrow, otherwise appeared "all right."

He was taken immediately to the Marine Recreation Camp, from which he apparently had wandered Friday morning, and a Navy physician administered saline solutions and ordered the boy to the emergency hospital at Big Bear Lake. His condition was described as "fairly good."

The blond, blue-eyed toddler was found by one of some 150 Marines who joined with about 40 San Bernardino County Sheriff's officers and more than 100 others in the exhaustive two-day search.

He was located at 4:35 p. m. (PST) in a brush and boulder strewn area that had been covered by searchers yesterday but was re-examined this afternoon at the request of Sheriff James W. Stocker.

The child, who came to this mile-high retreat with his parents from their home at the Marine base at Barstow, Calif., had been feared kidnapped at one stage of the search when bloodhounds lost his trail at a highway. Earlier today, however, tracks were found on Moon Ridge, near Sand Canyon.

Little Wayne came with his parents Thursday night to the recreation camp, a quarter mile south of Big Bear City.

Russians Fear Atom Bomb, War, F. P. A. Declares

Workers Lashed Into Greater Production

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—The Foreign Policy Association today published opinions that Russia is trying to lash workers into greater production with fears of the atom bomb and war with the United States and Britain.

American observers believe that "an atmosphere of feverish war preparedness" is being created in Russia by the use of the atom bomb and war with the United States and Britain.

He said that the U. N. was able to force "Russia to withdraw her force from Iran." He proposed: "If Russia indeed was going to use the veto without reason, then let those who stood against Russia renege her and act against her. Then the United States would not stand alone."

"Would Imperish U. S." The Marshall Plan, Revercomb continued, "calls for appropriation and expending of vast sums of money, not particularly to feed people in need, but to shelter them or to clothe them, but to sustain governments."

Navy "Helldiver" Pilot Is Killed

QUINCY, Mass., July 6 (AP)—A two-passenger Navy SB2C "Helldiver" bomber with a full load of gasoline plunged into a row of three homes on a takeoff today, killing its pilot, seriously injuring an enlisted passenger and leaving a trail of burned wreckage.

The pilot was identified as Ensign George E. Curley, USNR, Boston. Storekeeper Third Class Hugh F. Abert, also of Boston, the passenger, suffered a broken jaw, internal injuries and severe cuts.

The plane knocked a chimney off one house, stove in the roof and sheared off the upper back end of the second in line, then crashed into the crash of the "engine failure." He said a Navy board would investigate. The plane, worth $75,000, was the last of a flight of organized reserve craft to take off from Squantum on a routine weekend training flight.

She was Mrs. Mary Batchelder, 60, of 37 Faxon Road, who suffered burns about hands and face fleeing her home after the plane set afire. Mrs. Batchelder was lying on a cot on her back porch when the plane hit. She looked up to see the porch roof starting to sag, and ran to one side just before it fell.

Capt. Otho P. Smoot, commanding the Navy's Squantum base from which the plane took off, ascribed the crash to "engine failure." He said a Navy board would investigate. The plane, worth $75,000, was the last of a flight of organized reserve craft to take off from Squantum on a routine weekend training flight.

Both legal and medical problems beset them.

The legality of the "deathbed" petition of Miss Lupescu to marry her royal lover was contingent in part upon death itself.

The medical problem is her illness from anemia, a blood deficiency which has troubled her for months. Mrs. Ernest Udreaanu, the wife of Carol's secretary, said Mme. Lupescu had spent a bad night and that her condition continued grave.

The legality of the marriage petition, based on an interpretation of Brazil's unique "in extremis" marriage law.

In the case of Carol and Mme. Lupescu the situation is complicated by the fact that both have been divorced—Carol from Princess Helen of Greece and Mme. Lupescu from a Romanian army officer.

Brazilian law, while permitting divorce, allows the Supreme Court to decide whether foreign divorces may be recognized. This decision usually depends on whether such divorces were recognized in the foreign country.

Strike Looms As Operators, Lewis Continue Deadlocked

Aid Europe Plan Played By Senator

Terms Marshall's Outline 'New Deal'

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—Senator Revercomb (R-W.Va.) today criticized the "Marshall Plan" as a "new deal for the countries of Europe" that might cost the United States from 18 to 24 billion dollars.

"You cannot buy peace—you cannot buy peace," the West Virginia Republican said in a speech transcribed for broadcast later in West Virginia.

Revercomb contended that the foreign policy of the United States "has suddenly changed" from support of the United Nations to the "new plan of America to go it alone."

"The time has come when we must settle upon a policy," he said. "We want to aid other countries and other people, but that help must be within the bounds of our ability to help without injuring our own strength, and it must be upon a basis of help to those who do not hold the threat of war for us."

Revercomb disputed arguments that the United Nations "was not ready to take over the burden of peace-making" or that Russia's use of veto power against United Nations action compelled the new United States policy.

He said that the U. N. was able to force "Russia to withdraw her force from Iran." He proposed: "If Russia indeed was going to use the veto without reason, then let those who stood against Russia renege her and act against her. Then the United States would not stand alone."

"Would Imperish U. S." The Marshall Plan, Revercomb continued, "calls for appropriation and expending of vast sums of money, not particularly to feed people in need, but to shelter them or to clothe them, but to sustain governments."

At Odds Over Written Pact

WASHINGTON, July 6 (AP)—Attorneys for John L. Lewis and Soft Coal Operators remained locked over written terms of the proposed new contract for Northern and Steel Company Mines tonight, virtually eliminating hope for formal settlement before tomorrow.

A strike looms Tuesday when the miners end their ten-day vacation, unless a settlement is signed before then or Lewis calls off the threat at Northern and Steel Mines while the contract framing goes on.

The lawyers ran smack into the Taft-Hartley Labor Law when, according to some operators, Lewis insisted on protection for the union and the miners from the strike penalties for the Act.

Committee Rejected
Lewis held his 200-man Policy Committee in readiness to ratify the Northern and Steel Company Agreement—reached tentatively last Wednesday—but recessed them subject to call. Since it would take a couple of hours to reach a decision, the chance for a formal pact was regarded as slight after mid-evening even though the legal work might be completed.

About 150,000 of the 400,000 soft coal miners would be covered by the Northern-Steel Company Pact.

One operator who declined use of his name said that Lewis was insisting that the Union be cleared of the risk of being sued under provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act in the event of a strike, but that the producers were balky.

The new Labor Act permits suing of a union for breach of contract. The operator said further that Lewis wanted a union official—presumably himself—to be named chairman of the three-man board of trustees administering the huge welfare fund for the miners, and that this chairman should have veto power. The proposed new pact boosts the tonnage royalty to build up this fund from five to ten cents. It thus would yield more than $50,000,000 a year.

The UMW boss also was represented as demanding that the approximately $25,000,000 of coal produced from the royalty during the 13 months of government operation of the mines should be turned over to the new board established by the Northern-Steel Pact. The money was collected on coal produced in the Southern, Midwestern and Far Western fields as well as in the steel company mines and Northern mines.

The Federal Government turned back the soft coal pits to the operators July 1—after the miners' vacation had started—raising the contract crisis. Without a contract, the miners traditionally won't work for the operators.

Anthracite Contract Signed
The 75,000 Pennsylvania anthracite miners also are on a 10-day vacation, but they are under contract with their mine owners, closely patterned after the agreement made by Lewis and the government for the soft coal mines 13 months ago.

Tentative agreement on principles of a new contract was reached last Wednesday by Lewis and top industry representatives of the powerful steel company "captive" mines and big Northern commercial producers.

Attorneys have been trying to put that agreement in writing since last Thursday. Meanwhile the Southern, Midwestern and Far Western operators who don't relish the terms of the Northern-Steel Pact, waited to see whether they would sign the same kind of agreement and keep their mines from shutting down tight next Tuesday.

The Northern and Steel Company Agreement calls for a 44½-cent boost in the miner's basic hourly pay.

The Northern and Steel operations involve about 3,000 miners and employ nearly 150,000 miners. They account for 40 per cent of the annual production of more than 500,000,000 tons of bituminous coal. Some of the Steel Company mines, whose output goes entirely into the making of steel and doesn't reach the commercial coal markets, are located in the South.

Proposal For Embargo On Steel Really Makes Sense

The proposal by Senator Martin, of Pennsylvania, of a 30-day embargo on steel exports makes sense, the Senator is head of a congressional committee which has been investigating the steel shortage, including the "gray" market phases and exports. His suggestion for an embargo results from the findings of the committee, so far. Sizeable tonnages of steel now are at American ports awaiting shipment to foreign countries, the Senator said.

The apparent purpose of the proposed embargo is to allow the Martin committee to delve more deeply into the whole situation, and to permit the development of a sound policy. At present, it seems, there is no policy and steel is routed into domestic and foreign channels catch-as-catch-can.

It is not necessarily selfishness for us to exercise prudence in the distribution of our short steel supply. Take steel pipe. The lack of it threatens the country with a severe fuel shortage next winter, although the Cumberland & Allegheny Gas Company here has been striving to connect supplies from new wells with feeder lines for Cumberland and other areas in Allegheny County. This shortage threat not only raises the threat of privation for our people, but is a distinct danger to industrial production.

If, as Senator Martin points out, thousands of factories are required to shut down for lack of steel, the resulting unemployment and the lack of production will have serious repercussions in other parts of the world.

We can't promote rehabilitation in Europe and elsewhere if our own plant is crippled. The coal shutdown need not in itself cause any great anxiety, but a prolonged strike beyond the miners' vacation period would intensify the situation.

It is, as Senator Martin said, a "very real emergency."

Another war would destroy civilization, is the favorite aphorism of those who favor appeasement of Russia. What they mean is that war with Russia would destroy communism.

Can U. S. Leave Japan?

Evidently there is some disagreement on the scene as to when Japan will be ready for parole.

General MacArthur is on record as believing she can be left to her own devices very soon—shortly after the signing of a peace treaty. But American military government officials who administer populous southwestern Japan are reported to be "unanimous in the belief that American occupation must be maintained for many years, perhaps for a generation. Japan hasn't had time, these officials say, to break with her totalitarian past. The Japs are changing, but if the United States pulled out they would drift back into their former ways of thinking and acting. The 150,000 occupation troops now in Japan will not all be needed, in the opinion of these officials, but there should be enough to maintain American supervision in each of Japan's 46 prefectures.

If this is true, it is bad news for American taxpayers. Occupation costs are high. It is now asserted that it will be necessary for American armed might to remain in Germany longer than had been thought, and that the recovery of Europe is going to take longer than anyone expected. The same prospect for Japan is not encouraging.

Probably the truth lies somewhere between these differing opinions. It is hardly to MacArthur's discredit if he has been over-optimistic. He has had the habit of accomplishing the impossible, and the complexity of the problems he faces now would tax the grasp of any man.

It would not be wise to withdraw from Japan too hastily, but it should be possible to avoid the necessity of staying indefinitely.

Blow To War On Waste

Representative Halleck, majority leader of the House, is right in saying the President's veto of the tax bill makes doubly hard the task of reducing federal expenditures. "What's the use?" is likely to be the attitude of many members of Congress when they are asked to stand four-square against extravagance in government and in favor of clipping the wings and power of bureaucracy.

What the President has done by his veto is to give the impression that the government at Washington must continue to spend money at a lavish rate. As a result, advocates of economy may be understandingly discouraged, although they are in a position, by cutting appropriations, to achieve the results they desire.

With all hope of lower taxes gone, they will lack the former intense urge to carry out their campaign promise to do something for the people.

This could be one of the worst consequences of the Truman veto. The spenders are not exactly in the saddle but there are enough of them to interfere with, if not actually block, the efforts of the majority to put government on a business basis.

The need for saving money is as acute as ever. Popular demand for lopping off useless government personnel and service is no less insistent than before. Because of the opposition of one man, the American people will not have their taxes reduced. But there is still hope that expenditures can be reduced, despite this same man's opposition, if Congress will do its duty.

Social Security Freeze

By unanimous vote the House of Representatives decided to freeze social security taxes at their present rate for two more years. Similar action by the Senate is forecast. This means a continuation of the assessment of one per cent on wages paid to employees who come under provisions of the social security law. The original Social Security Act was approved in 1935 and amended in 1939 to provide for a progressive increase in what employers and wage earners should pay, with a permanent take of three per cent from both employer and employee, or a total of six per cent, reached in 1949.

But the one per cent contributions provided more money than was needed to meet social security claims and Congress kept the rate at one per cent despite frantic efforts of government flunkies to boost it, and now another definite step has been taken to hold the line.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

THE secretions from the thyroid gland control the metabolism of the body. When an excess is manufactured, as in toxic goiter, the human furnace burns the tissues and food more rapidly.

There is a gradual increase in nervousness and irritability. The hands shake, the tongue trembles, the skin is flushed and warm, and the appetite is ravenous but in spite of eating more, weight is lost.

As toxicity deepens, many develop a peculiar staring expression. In exophthalmic goiter, the eyes actually protrude, showing more of the white than usual. The gland is not necessarily enlarged and in many instances does not change in size. A breathing test will disclose an increased basal metabolic rate; a study of the blood cholesterol supplies confirmatory evidence.

In the past, iodine was prescribed and when metabolism reached a respectable level, the structure was removed. During the last few years, newer preparations have appeared which offer some promise of a medical treatment. The first was thiouracil, which is capable of lowering metabolism but produced reactions in so many patients that it could not be utilized by all. This was a drawback. The remedy was also found to be useful in the more severe cases where surgery might prove risky or when iodine was ineffective in lowering metabolism prior to surgery.

But research workers did not give up and an improved product, propylthiouracil, is becoming available. This drug is safer and can be administered over a long period with a minimum of danger. Furthermore, it combats toxicity just as effectively as its predecessor. Shortly after taking the medicine, the majority are less nervous, begin to gain weight, and show improvement in their laboratory tests.

Time will solve the question as the drug has not been employed long enough to come to conclusions. It is known, however, that when discontinued, the good effects continue in many; others relapse and need operation for permanent results.

Radioactive iodine is being used experimentally in this disorder and some of the early reports are encouraging. At present this substance is more difficult to obtain.

MARRING THE FURNITURE

Mrs. H. C. writes: When my husband's hands perspire, and he touches a table or chair, a white spot appears just as if alcohol had been spilled. He takes beer and whiskey occasionally but is not a habitual drinker. Could this be caused by alcoholic beverages or some food that he eats?

REPLY

Your hubby and Midas have trouble with everything they touch. Perspiration contains various substances such as salts and acids. It is conceivable that in some individuals the secretion might be strong enough to react with the varnish. I question whether the small amount of alcohol your husband consumes has anything to do with the phenomenon.

TRAVELING GERMS

M. L. B. writes: What is the difference between a cold and sinus trouble?

REPLY

A cold generally refers to an infection in the respiratory passages including the nose, throat, and bronchi. If it travels into the sinuses, then sinusitis is present. Because these structures consist of pocket-like spaces extending from the nose, they do not drain easily and nests of germs are likely to linger long after the original infection has subsided.

IRRITABLE BLADDER

E. R. T. writes: What causes a nervous bladder?

REPLY

Irritability from infection is the most common origin. The term is often used in referring to frequent urination, which may result from anxiety and other emotional changes. Sometimes the fault does not lie in the organ itself but in the tiny tube leading to the outside.

RHEUMATIC FEVER

D. R. writes: Are the symptoms of rheumatic fever about the same in children and adults?

Yes, although in the younger age groups joint manifestations may be less prominent than in adults.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

His Royal Highness, Prince Hamid-Reza Pahlavi of Iran, is the first schoolboy in history to play hockey on a transatlantic plane.

He had been missing from New York for several days, but at first they thought he just got tied up at the kindergarten session of the U. N.

The Italian Legation finally found the fifteen-year-old heir to the throne in France. He explained that he was carrying his girl's books home for her. . . she just happened to live in Paris.

He carried a thousand dollars with him for movie and candy money. I thought this a bit unusual until I found out he bought a hundred shares of stock in "Duel in the Sun" and a small fudge factory in Egypt!

It seems he didn't like his classroom. When the pupils threw spitballs, he insisted on throwing rubber balls. He thought giving the teacher an apple a little silly. He tried buying her off with a small kingdom.

It must be quite a problem disciplining royalty in a classroom. When he raises his hand the rest of the kids fall to their knees and bow.

Reluctantly he will return to America in a few days to continue his school work. Of course, they're not worried about finding him if he should run away again. The truant officer is now supplied with a full set of passports and a jet plane.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senator Murray Urges President Truman to Re-state His Support For Missouri Valley Authority; Secretary of State Marshall States U. S. Position on Palestine

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—The disastrous floods along the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers were very much on his mind as Senator Jim Murray of Montana, with Ben Stong of Denver, Colorado, chairman of the regional Missouri River Association, called at the White House last week.

After introducing Stong to the President, the Montana Senator proposed to Truman that he send a message to Congress restating his support for a Missouri Valley Authority in connection with the present floods.

"Here is an ideal time to restate your support of MVA in the strongest possible terms," said Murray, who was the original author of MVA. "A strong statement from you now would mean added hope for the people who are today suffering millions of dollars' loss because of the floods."

"You're perfectly right, Jim," the President replied. "I'm still for an MVA, but I don't see how we can do anything with the present Congress. I just can't see this Congress approving that or a Columbia Valley Authority when we both know that if they had their way they'd even kill off TVA (the Tennessee Valley Authority)."

"That's probably true," Murray admitted. "But the fact is that there could be no more opportune time for a strong message from you making it clear that the Administration is anxious to go ahead with a program designed not only to prevent repetition of the flood damage of this spring and summer but also to develop the industrial and agricultural resources of the Missouri Basin."

"The President promised to think over Murray's proposal, but refused to commit himself definitely.

Marshall On Palestine

Secretary of State George Marshall has already learned that not all members of Congress are statesmen. Last week he learned that at least one member is no diplomat, even though a conscientious and valuable member of the House.

Marshall was visited by Senators Jim Murray of Montana, Lister Hill of Alabama, Glen Taylor of Idaho, Ed Johnson of Colorado, Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Claude Pepper of Florida, Frank Myers of Pennsylvania, and blunt-spoken Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York—the nondiplomat. The senators were worried about the Palestine situation, and wanted assurance from Marshall regarding the United States' position.

Marshall assured his callers that this country would not alter "its traditional policy" on the Palestine question, whereupon Senator Pepper interposed:

"Mr. Secretary, we are concerned not about the on-the-record policy of the United States, but rather by our long history of failing to implement our official statements."

Again Marshall said he saw no likelihood of any change in our policy but insisted that the United States could do nothing until the recommendations of the United Nations Commission now in Palestine were filed. "Then we will come to grips with the problem in the light of those recommendations," he said.

Perhaps recalling that half his callers had opposed the Greek-Turkish aid plan on the ground that it by-passed the United Nations, Marshall added, "I'm sure you gentlemen understand the importance of our taking no step which would be interpreted abroad as an affront to the United Nations."

Assured by Murray, who had arranged the conference, that all agreed that point, Marshall nodded his head and said earnestly: "I want you gentlemen to know that I am terribly anxious to see a solution to the Palestine problem. We must achieve an acceptable plan—and it must be a plan which will work. No plan is of any value unless it will work."

It was at this point that Congressman Celler stepped in. Abruptly he asked: "Mr. Secretary, are you familiar with the charges against the Middle East Desk of the State Department in Mr. Bartley Crum's book 'Behind The Silken Curtain'? That book charges the State Department with shocking duplicity in the conduct of the Palestine affair, and makes the point that over a period of years every time a constructive and encouraging statement has been issued by our Government, Arab leaders have been quietly assured by the State Department that they need not take these statements seriously."

"I have not read Mr. Crum's book," Marshall replied, "but I can assure you that everything pertaining to the State Department policy on this matter will cross my desk, I will stand for no duplicity in the Department—and that is something I can do something about."

Marshall then suggested that Congress is not on the strongest possible ground in criticizing Britain for its handling of the Palestine problem because no steps have yet been taken here to open our gates to any important number of displaced persons from Europe.

"We ought to get the mote out of our own eye," he said, before complaining about the British.

Marshall listened with interest—but would not commit himself—as Pepper suggested that the whole problem be treated as one. The Florida Senator proposed that Marshall take the lead in working out an international plan for immigration of displaced persons, even proposing the numbers each country should receive.

When Marshall would not commit himself on this proposal, Celler exploded.

"I think it high time, Mr. Secretary," he said, "for this country to record its position on the Palestine question, and I think that any strong statement from you is bound to strengthen the United Nations. I don't think to remind you that Russia has stated her position publicly, and I would like to see my country do likewise."

Celler then proceeded to comment in detail on the Russian position but could draw no comment from the Secretary of State. Marshall ignored the remark and the conference broke up.

On Broadway the is as much a part of the speech as the adverb and the preposition. The setting-out exercises for most of its inhabitants consist of jumping at conclusions and stretching the imagination. On Doubletalk Drive the best conversationalist is generally the fellow with the best sense of humor.

This runaway inflation in the vocabulary is all fun and games, and hurts nobody in particular. That is, unless you start believing in yourself.

Which brings us to the saga of a small-time horse-player named Marcus McGonigle.

I sighted Marcus on Sixth Avenue last week. He was wearing a set of threads which gave him shoulders which he had had none, and a three-hundred-dollar Panama, the kind that's woven under water for reasons best understood by the Panamanians.

"What ho, McGonigle," I hailed him. "Did they strike oil in your bedroom?"

"Haven't you heard?" grinned the two-buck better. "I cleaned up on the Kentucky Derby."

"On the level?"

"Not exactly," said Marcus. "But I might as well have."

I steered him into Toots Shor's celebrated hash house, had the waiter set up a couple of tall ones, and said to Marcus, "Elucidate."

A couple of months back, the horseplayer made the pilgrimage to Louisville for the Derby. What with Derby week hotel prices and some unsuccessful preliminary speculations, his bankroll was soon so thin you could have read fine print through it. On the great day, he didn't even have the price of a two-dollar tote ticket.

Then things started to happen. Out at the jam-packed track, Marcus saw a gold cigarette case drop to the ground and a man pulled a handkerchief out of his pocket. Marcus picked it up and ran after the gent who had lost it. The owner of the case was very grateful. "I'd never have forgiven myself," he said. "The case was a present from my boy. He's in the Navy. Flies those experimental jet planes."

"That's a hunch," laughed Marcus. "If you're going to bet, bet Jeopardy."

"Good idea," said the man. "But I'm afraid to buck those crowds around the betting windows. Got a game leg." Marcus noticed the heavy walking stick he was carrying.

"You hadn't ought to hand your money over to strangers at a race track," said Marcus. "But I'll place the bet for you, if you like."

"I think I can trust you," said the stranger. "Bet two thousand on Jet Pilot to win."

On his way back from the $100 window, Marcus ran into Pete Madden, another small-time horseplayer. "What do you like?" Pete asked Marcus.

For a gag, McGonigle showed him the fistful of tickets. "Two thousand on Jet Pilot to win," he told him.

"That started it. Jet Pilot romped home through the mud and paid seven to one."

When McGonigle got back to the Kentucky Hotel that night, everyone wanted to buy him a drink. When he tried to tell the wise mob it wasn't his bet, they gave him the elaborate wink and ordered up another round. "Fraid of a touch, eh?" they kidded the stone-brick horseplayer. Next night, Sunday, a commentator broadcasting from New York cracked that a nameless Scot had cleaned up a hundred forty grand on the Run for the Roses.

McGonigle in the private car of a railroad executive who kept asking him questions on blood lines and training techniques.

When Marcus walked down Broadway next day, the boys did everything but shower him with ticker tape. An automobile salesman offered him a Cadillac for only a thousand over list. An old wife showed up with a lawyer and a tab for back alimony.

McGonigle kept protesting it was nonsense, but Broadway figured that was only one man's opinion. A thousand wise guys on Doubletalk Drive knew better. At the end of a week, his winnings ballooned to a quarter of a million at Ruben's all-night sandwich parlor. The lads at Lindy's called that figure and raised it to a cool half million.

The following week Marcus went to the races at Belmont. In the clubhouse, Frank Martinson, the legendary bookie, gave Marcus the giant-sized hello and then whispered he'd be pleased to handle some of his play.

In the third race, there was a horse Marcus fancied. Because so many people kept staring at him, Marcus was ashamed to make his usual two-buck bet and decided to raise it to five. Martinson sidled over and asked what he liked. "Five on Underbrush to win," Marcus told him.

"Check," said the big bookie. Underbrush won by three lengths, and paid $12 for a $2 ticket. And the race, Marcus handed Marcus an envelope with 25 one thousand dollar bills.

McGonigle counted it and said, "There's some mistake."

"How come?" said the bookie. "Five thousand at the win odds is twenty-five thousand dollars, isn't it?"

"The multiplication is right," said Marcus. "But . . ."

"Don't forget me on future bets," cut in the bookie. "You sure can pick 'em," he added ruefully.

"That night at Lindy's, a waiter paid $50 to another waiter to let him serve McGonigle his sour cream and chopped vegetables, on the off chance the great man might give him a tip for his tip."

"That was two weeks ago, Billy," said McGonigle, fishing for the cherry at the bottom of his glass. "Just shows what can happen when you believe what you hear on this street."

I called for the tab, paid it, and we stood up.

"By the way," said Marcus. "Slip me a dollar, will you? That Panama cost three hundred and it wouldn't

THE ROOSEVELT BOOKS

It was inevitable that numerous books would be written about Franklin D. Roosevelt once death made him history. Those who assume that history is a kindly scribe—a Broadway press agent—fail to realize that Roosevelt can fare only as well as the record will disclose. And the record will surely change from year to year as more material appears.

When the Churchill memoirs, the Kew Diary, the archives of the State Department and, let us say, of the Soviet Foreign office become available to history, Roosevelt, as a figure on the stage of man's affairs, will be very different from what he is today, for better or for worse.

Much of it has to do with Winston Churchill, and as he is writing his memoirs, the phases that Elliott covered will soon appear in better and more graceful form.

Frances Perkins' book was kindly and interesting. One would doubt he would add to human knowledge. The Morgenthau monstrosity seems to have met with foul weather, although I assume that in some form it will sooner or later appear. There will be other books, friendly, unfriendly, fair and unfair, objective, subjective, all kinds. All of this is preliminary to some comments on Jim Farley's articles in Collier's magazine. It is curious that certain unobjective adulators of Franklin D. Proposal For Embargo On Steel Really Makes Sense

The proposal by Senator Martin, of Pennsylvania, of a 30-day embargo on steel exports makes sense. The Senator is head of a congressional committee which has been investigating the steel shortage, including the "gray" market phases and exports. His suggestion for an embargo results from the findings of the committee, so far. Sizeable tonnages of steel now are at American ports awaiting shipment to foreign countries, the Senator said.

The apparent purpose of the proposed embargo is to allow the Martin committee to delve more deeply into the whole situation, and to permit the development of a sound policy. At present, it seems, there is no policy and steel is routed into domestic and foreign channels catch-as-catch-can.

It is not necessarily selfishness for us to exercise prudence in the distribution of our short steel supply. Take steel pipe. The lack of it threatens the country with a severe fuel shortage next winter, although the Cumberland & Allegheny Gas Company here has been striving to connect supplies from new wells with feeder lines for Cumberland and other areas in Allegheny County. This shortage threat not only raises the threat of privation for our people, but is a distinct danger to industrial production.

If, as Senator Martin points out, thousands of factories are required to shut down for lack of steel, the resulting unemployment and the lack of production will have serious repercussions in other parts of the world.

We can't promote rehabilitation in Europe and elsewhere if our own plant is crippled. The coal shutdown need not in itself cause any great anxiety, but a prolonged strike beyond the miners' vacation period would intensify the situation.

It is, as Senator Martin said, a "very real emergency."

Another war would destroy civilization, is the favorite aphorism of those who favor appeasement of Russia. What they mean is that war with Russia would destroy communism.

Can U. S. Leave Japan?

Evidently there is some disagreement on the scene as to when Japan will be ready for parole.

General MacArthur is on record as believing she can be left to her own devices very soon—shortly after the signing of a peace treaty. But American military government officials who administer popular southwestern Japan are reported to be "unanimous in the belief that American occupation must be maintained for many years, perhaps for a generation.

Japan hasn't had time, these officials say, to break with her totalitarian past. The Japs are changing, but if the United States pulled out they would drift back into their former ways of thinking and acting. The 150,000 occupation troops now in Japan will not all be needed, in the opinion of these officials, but there should be enough to maintain American supervision in each of Japan's 46 prefectures.

If this is true, it is bad news for American taxpayers. Occupation costs are high. It is now asserted that it will be necessary for American armed might to remain in Germany longer than had been thought, and that the recovery of Europe is going to take longer than anyone expected. The same prospect for Japan is not encouraging.

Probably the truth lies somewhere between these differing opinions. It is hardly to MacArthur's discredit if he has been over-optimistic. He has had the habit of accomplishing the impossible, and the complexity of the problems he faces now would tax the grasp of any man.

It would not be wise to withdraw from Japan too hastily, but it should be possible to avoid the necessity of staying indefinitely.

Blow To War On Waste

Representative Halleck, majority leader of the House, is right in saying the President's veto of the tax bill makes doubly hard the task of reducing federal expenditures. "What's the use?" is likely to be the attitude of many members of Congress when they are asked to stand four-square against extravagance in government and in favor of clipping the wings and power of bureaucracy.

What the President has done by his veto is to give the impression that the government at Washington must continue to spend money at a lavish rate. As a result, advocates of economy may be understandingly discouraged, although they are in a position, by cutting appropriations, to achieve the results they desire.

With all hope of lower taxes gone, they will lack the former intense urge to carry out their campaign promise to do something for the people.

This could be one of the worst consequences of the Truman veto. The spenders are not exactly in the saddle but there are enough of them to interfere with, if not actually block, the efforts of the majority to put government on a business basis.

The need for saving money is as acute as ever. Popular demand for lopping off useless government personnel and service is no less insistent than before. Because of the opposition of one man, the American people will not have their taxes reduced. But there is still hope that expenditures can be reduced, despite this same man's opposition, if Congress will do its duty.

Social Security Freeze

By unanimous vote the House of Representatives decided to freeze social security taxes at their present rate for two more years. Similar action by the Senate is forecast. This means a continuation of the assessment of one per cent on wages paid to employees who come under provisions of the social security law.

The original Social Security Act was approved in 1935 and amended in 1939 to provide for a progressive increase in what employers and wage earners should pay, with a permanent take of three per cent from both employer and employee, or a total of six per cent, reached in 1949.

But the one per cent contributions provided more money than was needed to meet social security claims and Congress kept the rate at one per cent despite frantic efforts of government flunkies to boost it, and now another definite step has been taken to hold the line.

In the past, iodine was prescribed and when hypermetabolism reached a respectable level, the structure was removed. During the last few years, newer preparations have appeared which offer some promise of a medical treatment. The first was thiouracil, which is capable of lowering metabolism but produced reactions in so many patients that it could not be utilized by all. This was a drawback. The remedy was also found to be useful in the more severe cases where surgery might prove risky or when iodine was ineffective in lowering metabolism prior to surgery.

Research workers did not give up and an improved product, propylthiouracil, is becoming available. This drug is safer and can be administered over a long period with a minimum of danger. Furthermore, it combats toxicity just as effectively as the old drug. Shortly after taking the medicine, the majority are less nervous, begin to gain weight, and show improvement in their laboratory tests.

Time will solve the question as the drug has not been employed long enough to come to conclusions. It is known, however, that when discontinued, the good effects continue in many; others relapse and need operation for permanent results.

Radioactive iodine is being used experimentally in this disorder and some of the early reports are encouraging. At present, this substance is more difficult to obtain.

MARRIAGE THE FURNITURE

Mrs. H. C. writes: When my husband's chair, and he took it to a table or chair, a white spot appears just as if alcohol had been spilled. He takes beer and whisky occasionally but is not a habitual drinker. Could this be caused by alcoholic beverages or some food that he eats?

Your hubby and Midas have trouble with everything they touch. Perspiration contains various substances such as salts and acids. It is conceivable that in some individuals the secretion might be strong enough to stain. I question whether the small amount of alcohol your husband consumes has anything to do with the phenomenon.

TRAVELING GERMS

M. L. B. writes: What is the difference between a cold and sinus trouble?

REPLY

A cold generally refers to an infection in the respiratory passages including the nose, throat, and bronchi. If it travels into the sinuses, then sinusitis is present. Because these structures consist of pocket-like spaces extending from the nose, they do not drain easily and nests of germs are likely to linger long after the original infection has subsided.

IRRITABLE BLADDER

E. R. T. writes: What causes a nervous bladder?

REPLY

Irritability from infection is the most common origin. The term is often used in referring to frequent urination, which may result from anxiety and other emotional changes. Sometimes the fault does not lie in the organ itself but in the tiny tube leading to the outside.

RHEUMATIC FEVER

D. R. writes: Are the symptoms of rheumatic fever about the same in children and adults?

REPLY

Yes, although in the younger age groups joint manifestations may be less prominent than in adults.

He carried a thousand dollars with him for movie and candy money. I thought this a bit unusual until I found out he bought a hundred shares of stock in "Duel in the Sun" and a small fudge factory in Egypt!

It seems he didn't like his classroom. When the pupils threw spitballs, he insisted on throwing rubies. He thought giving the teacher an apple a little silly. He tried buying her off with a small kingdom.

It must be quite a problem disciplining royalty in a classroom. When he raises his hand the rest of the kids fall to their knees and bow.

Reluctantly he will return to America in a few days to continue his school work. Of course, they're not worried about finding him if he should run away again. The triumphant officer is now supplied with a full set of passports and a jet plane.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Senator Murray Urges President Truman to Re-state His Support For Missouri Valley Authority; Secretary of State Marshall States U. S. Position on Palestine

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—The disastrous floods along the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers were very much on the mind of Senator Jim Murray of Montana, when he met with Denver, Colorado, chairman of the regional Missouri River Association, called at the White House last week.

After introducing Stong to the President, the Montana Senator proposed to Truman that he send a message to Congress restating his support for a Missouri Valley Authority in connection with the present floods.

"Here is an ideal time to restate your support of MVA in the strongest possible terms," said Murray, who was the originating author of MVA. "A strong statement of your support would mean added hope for the people who are today suffering millions of dollars' loss because of the floods."

"You're perfectly right, Jim," the President replied. "I'm still for an MVA, but I don't see how we can do anything with the present Congress. I just can't see this Congress approving that or a Columbia Valley Authority when we both know that if they had their way they'd even kill off TVA (the Tennessee Valley Authority)." Murray admitted, "But the fact is that there could be no more opportunity for a strong message from you making it clear that the Administration is anxious to go ahead with a program designed not only to prevent repetition of the flood damage of this spring and summer but also to develop the industrial and agricultural resources of the Missouri Basin."

The President promised to think over Murray's proposal, but refused to commit himself definitely.

Marshall On Palestine

Secretary of State George Marshall has already learned that not all members of Congress are statesmen. Last week he learned that at least one member is no diplomat, even though a conscientious and valuable member of the House.

Marshall was visited by Senators Jim Murray of Montana, Lister Hill of Alabama, Glen Taylor of Idaho, Ed Johnson of Colorado, Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Claude Pepper of Florida, Frank Myron of Pennsylvania, and blunt-spoken Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York—the nondiplomat. The senators were worried about the Palestine situation, and wanted assurance from Marshall regarding the United States position.

Marshall assured his callers that the country would not alter "its traditional policy" on the Palestine question, whereupon Senator Pepper interposed:

"Mr. Secretary, we are concerned about the on-the-record policy of the United States, but rather by our long history of failing to implement our official statements."

Again Marshall said he saw no likelihood of any change in our policy but insisted that the United States would stand firm until the recommendations of the United Nations Commission now in Palestine were filed. "Then we will come to grips with the problem in the light of those recommendations," he said.

Perhaps recalling that half his callers had opposed the Greek-Turkish aid plan on the ground that it by-passed the United Nations, Marshall added, "I'm sure you gentlemen understand the importance of our taking no step which would be interpreted abroad as an affront to the United Nations."

Assured by Murray, who had arranged the conference, that all agreed on that point, Marshall nodded his head and said earnestly:

"I want you gentlemen to know that I am terribly anxious to see a solution to the Palestine problem. We must achieve an acceptable plan—and it must be a plan which will do no plan is of any value unless it will work."

Celler Chafes

It was at this point that Congressman Celler stepped in. Abruptly he asked:

"Mr. Secretary, are you familiar with the charges against the Middle East Desk of the State Department in Mr. Bartley Crum's book 'Behind the Sulfur Curtain'? That book charges the State Department with shocking duplicity in the conduct of the Palestine affair, and makes the point that over a period of years every time a constructive and encouraging statement has been issued by our Government, Arab leaders have been quietly assured by the State Department that they need not take these statements seriously."

"I have not read Mr. Crum's book," Marshall replied. "But I can assure you that everything pertaining to the State Department policy on this matter will cross my desk. I will stand for no duplicity in the Department—and that is something I can do something about."

Marshall then suggested that Congress is not on the strongest possible ground in criticizing Britain for its handling of the Palestine problem because no steps have yet been taken here to open our gates to any important number of displaced persons from Europe.

"We ought to get the mote out of our own eye," he said, before complaining about the British.

Marshall listened with interest—but would not commit himself. The Pepper suggested that the whole problem be treated as one. The Florida Senator proposed that Marshall take the lead in working out an international plan for immigration of displaced persons, even proposing the numbers each country should accept.

When Marshall would not commit himself on this proposal, Celler exploded.

"I think it high time, Mr. Secretary," he said, "for this country to record its position on the Palestine question, and I think that any strong statement from you is bound to strengthen, rather than weaken, the United Nations. I don't have to remind you that Russia has stated her position publicly, and she would like to see my country do likewise."

Celler then proceeded to comment in detail on the Russian position, but could draw no comment from Marshall. The remark and the conference broke up.

On Broadway the ill is as much a part of speech as the adverb and the preposition. The setting-up exercises for most of its inhabitants consist of jumping at conclusions and stretching the imagination. On Doubletalk Drive the best conversation is generally in the form of a series of puns.

This runaway inflation in the vocabulary is all fun and games, and hurts none, but in particular that is, unless you start believing it yourself. Which brings me to the saga of a small-time horseplayer named Marcus McGonigle.

I sighted Marcus on Sixth Avenue last week. He was wearing a set of threads which gave him shoulders where he had had none, and a three-hundred-buck Panama, the kind that's woven under water for reasons best understood by the Panamanians.

"What ho, McGonigle," I hailed him. "Did they strike oil in your bedroom?"

"Haven't you heard?" grinned the two-buck better. "I cleaned up on the Kentucky Derby."

"Or the level of the Cocksack?" I asked.

"Not exactly," said Marcus. "But I might as well have."

I steered him into Toots Shor's celebrated hash house, had the waiter set up a couple of tall ones, and said to Marcus, "Elucidate."

Marcus did.

A couple of months back, the horseplayer made the pilgrimage to Louisville to see the Derby. What with Derby week hotel prices and some unsuccessful preliminary speculations, his bankroll was soon so thin you could have read fine print through it. On the great day, he didn't even have the price of a two-dollar tote ticket.

Then things started to happen. Out at the jam-packed track, Marcus saw a gold cigarette case drop to the ground as a man pulled a handkerchief out of his pocket. Marcus picked it up and ran after the owner who had lost it. The owner of the case was very grateful. "I'd never have forgiven myself," he said. "The case was a present from my boy. He's in the Navy. Flies those experimental jet planes."

"This is a hunch," laughed Marcus. "If you're going to bet, bet Jet Pilot."

"Good idea," said the man. "I'm afraid to bet those crowds around the betting windows. Got a game leg." Marcus noticed the heavy walking stick he was carrying.

"You hadn't ought to hand your money over to strangers at a race track," said Marcus. "But I'll place the bet for you, if you like."

"I think I can trust you," said the stranger. "Bet two thousand on Jet Pilot to win."

On his way back from the $100 window, Marcus ran into Pete Madden, another small-time horseplayer. "What do you like?" Pete asked Marcus.

"For a gag, McGonigle showed him the fistful of tickets. "Two thousand and fish on Jet Pilot to win," he told him.

"That started it. Jet Pilot romped home through the mud and paid seven to one."

When McGonigle got back to the Kentucky Hotel that night, everything he wanted to buy him a drink. When he tried to tell the wise mob it wasn't his bet, they gave him the elaborate wink and ordered another round. "Fraid of a touch, eh?" they kidded the stone-broke horseplayer. Next night, Sunday, a commentator broadcasting from New York described the race as a canny grand on the run for the Roses.

McGonigle journeyed back to New York in the private car of a railroad executive who kept asking him questions on blood lines and training techniques.

When Marcus walked down Broadway next day, the boys did everything but shower him with ticker tape. An automobile salesman offered him a Cadillac for only a thousand over list. An old wife showed up with a lawyer and a tab for back alimony.

McGonigle kept protesting it was nonsense, but Broadway figured that he was only one man's opinion. A thousand wise guys on Doubletalk Drive knew better. At the end of a week, his winnings had ballooned to a quarter of a million at Ruben's all-night sandwich parlor. The lads at Lindy's kept that figure and raised it to a cool half million.

The following week Marcus went to the races at Belmont. In the clubhouse, Frank Martinson, the legendary bookie, gave Marcus the grand-sized hello and the whispered order to please to handle some of his play.

In the third race, there was a horse Marcus fancied. Because so many people kept staring at him, Marcus was ashamed to make his usual two-buck bet and decided to raise it to five. Martinson sidled over and asked what he liked. "Five on Underbrush to win," Marcus told him.

"Check," said the big bookie. Underbrush won by three lengths, and paid $12. For a $2 ticket. After the race, Martinson handed Marcus an envelope with 25 one thousand dollar bills.

McGonigle counted it and said, "There's some mistake."

"How come?" said the bookie. "Fifty thousand at the win odds is twenty-five thousand dollars, isn't it?"

"The multiplication is right," said Marcus, "but . . ."

"Don't forget me on future bets," cut in the bookie. "You sure can pick 'em," he added ruefully.

That night at Lindy's, a waiter paid $50 to another waiter to let him serve McGonigle his soup, cream and chopped vegetables, on the off chance the great man might give him a tip for his tip.

"That was two weeks ago, Billy," said McGonigle, fishing for the cherry at the bottom of his glass. "Just shows what can happen when you believe what you hear on this street."

I called for the tab, paid it, and we stood up.

"By the way," said Marcus. "Slip me a dollar, will you? That Panama cost three hundred and it wouldn't look good if I gave the hat-check girl less than a buck."

"What happened to your twenty-five thousand?" I asked him.

"Martinson, the bookie, has it," McGonigle said. "He told me you gave it back."

"In a million dollars," McGonigle sighed. "So many people were saying I could pick the horses that I finally figured there must be something in it."

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, July 6.—Ida Lupino, who recently put her feet under a desk as a lady producer for Ben Bogaus (I'm sure lady producers don't put their feet ON a desk) has selected her first. She will boss and star in "Miracle in the Rain," a Ben Hecht magazine story that was published a bout four years ago.

We're certainly in for a cycle of "miracle" titles. "Miracle on 34th Street," which has been a miracle at the box office since it started in these lean days, probably started it. Then there is "Miracle of the Bells" and "A Miracle Can Happen." And just a short time ago, "miracle" was considered a fat word in a title!

Getting back to Ida's "Miracle in the Rain"—it gives her another one of those sad-glad roles that have made her what she is today. And last, but not least, the man both she and Bogaus want to direct it, is King Vidor.

Paul Baron, Simone Simon's boy friend, is in Hollywood to take over the musical direction of Jean Sabin's air show, and he also has news about Simone.

She is in New York dubbing the English version of "Temptation Harbor," a movie she made in Paris. It's been a long time since American fans have seen Simone on the screen. She's still a hot favorite in France—but something happened to her Hollywood career.

Maybe she was over-touted as a glamorous "import" when she first came here. Or perhaps an unfortunate romance that hit the newspapers, hurt her. Personally, I always thought she was a pretty good little actress.

Chatter in Hollywood: Eddie Lasker just can't seem to make up his mind between Jane Greer and Peggy Cummins. He's out with first one girl and then the other. But now Peggy's gone away on location, and Jane also leaves town soon.

This last week he gave Jane a gold charm for her bracelet with a reproduction of good reviews from her picture. Jane is really headed somewhere now that she's been borrowed by David Selznick and will be given an important role.

If you have any doubt of the efficiency and the speed with which the motion picture relief is taking care of its cases, you have only to apply to them for help.

Rudy Rama telephoned me to say that his only chance of living was to go to the Mayo Clinic where they have a special treatment for his sort of disease, a tropical parasite. He has a child and a wife, and no money. He was not eligible for relief, because he hadn't worked, but Wilma Bashour, who listens to hundreds of such stories every day, went right through with Rama's case after I explained it to her.

He's on a plane headed for Mayo, and here's hoping he'll get well.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random—Welcome into the Encyclopedia Britannica family, Groucho Marx! He'll write on comedy. I've written the lead story on motion pictures since 1939—not bad for a gay illiterate.

Dean Harens, Dianna Durbin's erstwhile leading man, arrived in Hollywood with his bride to make their home here. He was married to Jane Dayton on June 9.

Joan Miles, who cut off her romance with Lorraine Day's ex-husband, Ray Hendricks and was very much in the newspapers, seems to have changed her mind. She's out with Hendricks practically every night.

Jack Dempsey and the children are in Colorado visiting his family over the weekend.

The guests at Stephanie Wagner's fourth birthday party sound as if all the who's who in the younger set were there. Michael Boyer, who has all the manners of his dad, Charles Boyer, and Lance Brissan, who arrived in white gloves which he promised his mother, Rosalind Russell, to wear at least five minutes, were dapper swains. It was really a cute party. One of the cutest youngsters was the Ben Bogaus child.

Barbara Hale goes into Cedars of Lebanon the middle of the month to have her baby. While there, her husband, Bill Williams, will also

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, July 6.—Ida Lupino, who recently put her feet under a desk as a lady producer for Ben Bogus (I'm sure lady producers don't put their feet ON a desk) has selected her first. She will boss and star in "Miracle in the Rain," a Ben Hecht magazine story that was published about four years ago. We're certainly in for a cycle of "miracle" titles. "Miracle On 34th Street," which has been a miracle at the box office even in these lean days, probably started it. Then there is "Miracle Of The Bells" and "A Miracle Can Happen." And just a short time ago, "miracle" was considered a flat word in a title!

Getting back to Ida's "Miracle In the Rain"—it gives her another one of those sad-glad roles that have made her what she is today. And last, but not least, the man both she and Bogus want to direct it, is King Vidor.

Paul Baron, Simone Simon's boy friend, is in Hollywood to take over the musical direction of Jean Sablon's air show, and he also has news about Simone.

She is in New York dubbing the English version of "Temptation Harbor," a movie she made in Paris. It's been a long time since American fans have seen Simone on the screen. She's still a hot favorite in France—but something happened to her Hollywood career.

Maybe she was over-touted as a glamorous "impetuous" when she first came here. Or perhaps an unfortunate romance that hit the newspapers, hurt her. Personally, I always thought she was a pretty good little actress.

Chatter in Hollywood: Eddie Lasker just can't seem to make up his mind between Jane Greer and Peggy Cummins. He's out with first one girl and then the other. But now Peggy's gone away on location, and Jane also leaves town soon.

This last week he gave Jane a gold charm for her bracelet with a reproduction of good reviews from her picture. Jane is really headed somewhere now that she's been borrowed by David Seznick and will be given an important role.

If you have any doubt of the efficiency and the speed with which the motion picture relief is taking care of its cases, you have only to apply to them for help.

Rudy Rana telephoned me to say that his only chance of living was to go to the Mayo Clinic where they have a special treatment for his sort of disease, a tropical parasite. He has a child and a wife, and no money. He was not eligible for relief, because he hadn't worked, but Wilma Basior, who listens to hundreds of such stories every day, went right through with Rana's case after I explained it to her.

He's on a plane headed for Mayo, and here's hoping he'll get well.

Snaphots of Hollywood collected at random—Wendell and the very cyclopedic Britannica family. Groupy Marx! He'll write on comedy. I've written the lead story on motion pictures since 1939—not bad for a gay illiterate.

Dean Harens, Dianna Durbin's erstwhile leading man, arrived in Hollywood with his bride to make their home here. He was married to Jane Dayton on June 9.

Joan Miles, who cut off her romance with Laraine Day's ex-husband, Ray Hendricks and was very much in the newspapers, seems to have changed her mind. She's out with Hendricks practically every night.

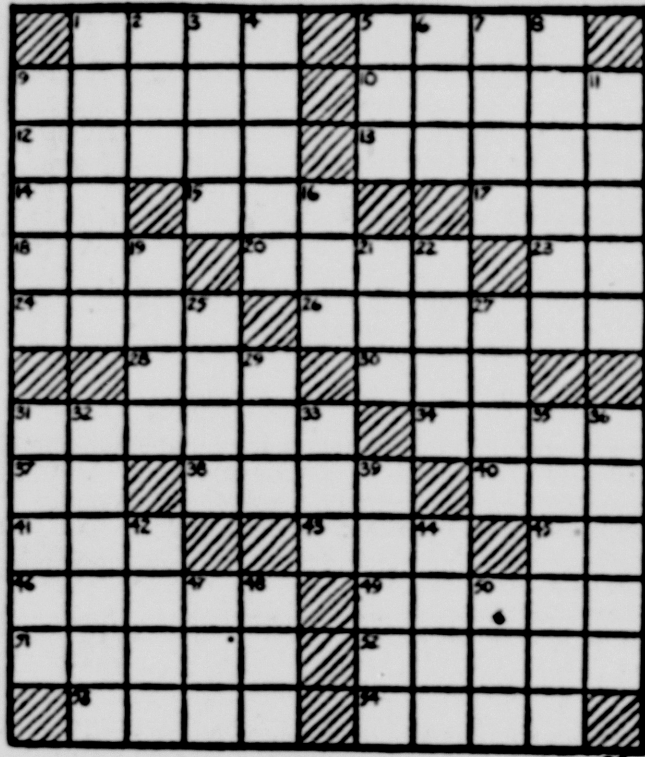

Jack Dempsey and the children are in Colorado visiting his family over the weekend.

The guests at Stephanie Wagner's fourth birthday party sound as if all the who's who in the younger set were there. Michael Boyer, who has all the manners of his dad, Charles Boyer, and Lance Brison, who arrived in white gloves, which he promised his mother, Rosalind Russell, to wear at least five minutes, were dapper swains. It was really a cute party. One of the cutest youngsters was the Ben Bogus child.

Barbara Hale goes into Cedars of Lebanon the middle of the month to have her baby. While there, her husband, Bill Williams, will also

Advice To The Lovelorn

Girl Advised To Make Friends In A More Conventional Way

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been meeting a certain fellow often at the movies but have never met him on the street. I have grown to like him very much, and he also likes me. I am afraid that if I met him on the street he would change his attitude towards me. What is the best thing to do?

"BEWILDERED"

Dear "Bewildered":

In the first place, don't you think it is rather a poor idea to pick up boys at the movies? It is true that nice people are occasionally met in unconventional ways, but it seems to me that, if this boy were the kind who would make a good friend, he would by this time have suggested coming to your home and taking you out in the proper way. He would hardly be content to go on simply meeting you in this haphazard fashion.

I certainly cannot see why you should think he would like you less on the street than in the movies anyhow. You would have to explain this a little more fully than you have done before I would see any sense to it.

In the meantime, I suggest that you wait until he shows signs of wanting to make your relationship more conventional before worrying about the thing one way or another.

Gossip Broke Up Friendship

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 20 and, after living a very active social life without finding any one man I cared about particularly, I finally met one I care for a lot. He is 26 years old and has all the characteristics I would want in a man. We just clicked from the start.

Then, because of some gossip, we drifted apart, and while we have everything settled now and have fun again, that "certain something" we had before is missing. When we meet at dances, or other places, I know he wants to be with me, but his friends come up and, before I know it, they have me to themselves. He is very sensitive and goes off and sits by himself, or joins another crowd and leaves early, and he ignores me for the rest of the evening. I don't want to run after him or let anyone know how I feel, so I pretend I am having a swell time.

How can I get him to ask me to go out again? Shall I play along and hope for a change, or shall I forget him?

"PERPLEXED"

Dear "Perplexed":

Neither friendship nor affection can be forced. If either of them does not happen spontaneously between two people, there is nothing you can do about it.

You don't say what sort of gossip it was that caused the difference between the two of you, and, if you had told me, perhaps I should have been able to tell you what the trouble might be now. It may be, however, that when you meet this boy at dances and other places, you don't give him enough chance to pay attention to you, but accept the first advances from these other friends.

Why don't you try inviting him over to your house some night and see if he will accept the invitation?

If he does, it will show that he wants to let bygones be bygones and take up his former friendship with you again. If he declines your invitation, then you had better take the hint, stop thinking about him, and concentrate on your other friends.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and married to a serviceman 21 years old. We loved each other very much when we were married two months later. At first we were very happy, but I soon found out that he was very jealous. He was even jealous of my friends. He has been away for four months now and his parents wrote and told him that I was going around with other men. He believed it, although I have been true to my husband. It is true that I talk to my men friends sometimes and perhaps have a coke at the drugstore with them, but I love my husband and he is all I want.

He wants me to ask for a divorce, but why should I when I love him and have not done anything wrong?

"A SOLDIER'S WIFE"

Dear "Soldier's Wife":

Are you quite certain that you have never done anything, while your husband was away, to give his parents grounds for suspecting your loyalty to him? It is perfectly true, of course, that some husbands are so jealous that their suspicions are aroused with little or no reason, but, at the same time, it seems a little strange that his parents would make up stories about you.

Your husband can't force you to divorce him, and he would have to prove that you had been unfaithful to him in order to get a divorce for himself. Unless he is overseas, isn't there some way that you could be nearer him, where he could be with you when he was away from his post? Why don't you suggest that to him and see if you can't persuade him that you really want to be with him? If this is impossible, then I suggest that you be very careful in all your actions not to give anyone any reason to criticize or to pass on to your husband unfavorable accounts of your behavior.

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

ALL THE GIMMICKS

One thing may be said about Don McNeill, toastmaster of the Breakfast Club, (A. B. C. 9 a. m. EDT Mondays through Fridays): He doesn't give anything away on his program, not even an orchid.

The audience participants get a warm handshake and go away apparently satisfied. Apart from that, however, Mr. McNeill has taxed his program with just about every gimmick known to broadcasting. He offers his listeners a band, a couple of singers, comedy (or what passes for comedy), interviews with minor celebrities and sometimes major ones, and—best of all—like to chat with Mrs. Sarah Bittendorfer from Duluth, who is 85 years old and has been listening to the Breakfast Club since it started.

That's the real gimmick. The listener might sometimes get on the show sooner or later. A great many of McNeill's listeners get to Chicago where the show originates, and if they wait a few weeks in advance, they will get a free ticket. The chances of being invited up to the microphone aren't very great, but a girl can hope, can't she? And if she succeeds, what a delightful surprise to the children, and Cousin Abner and Mrs. Mason who lives next door, all of them listening anxiously back in Albuquerque. And even if she doesn't, if she only attends, chances are she will listen to the show the rest of her life. Since McNeill has been on the air for years he's built up a large and extraordinarily loyal audience that will stick with him, presumably forever.

To provide a few details, in case you never heard the Breakfast Club, which is unlikely, the show is composed roughly of two parts: applause and laughter from the audience, one part music and jokes, and one part interviews with Aunt Agnes from Dubuque or George Jessel from Hollywood. It would be difficult to find so many commercials tucked into a single hour in any other network show. McNeill has sold his program to four sponsors and each one indulges in three commercials in addition to a couple of odd mentions of the product during his quarter-hour. Many of the jokes between McNeill and his cast or his audience participants lead right into a plug for Lustré Cream Shampoo or possibly Pren.

The part the audience participants play in this program is fortunately small. McNeill asks the ladies—they usually elderly women—where they come from, when they are going back and if they have had a nice trip. As I remarked earlier, some of this leads right into a commercial. A 19-year-old boy who boasted that his was the finest head of hair in Dixie was asked what caused this magnificent growth. "Lustré Cream Shampoo," he said obligingly.

"Do you go to the movies?" inquired Mr. McNeill.

"Sure would." The conversation

hair in Dixie.

"Ever see Martha Stewart?"

"Sure."

"Like to meet her?"

"Sure would." The conversation sometimes gets brighter than this, but not much.

"Well, there she is," said Mr. McNeill.

The finest head of hair in Dixie said, "Hello."

"Well, you've done enough," said McNeill, not unkindly, "go back and sit down."

Incidentally, McNeill has a pleasant enough personality. He doesn't shout and his jokes, while not terribly funny, are amiable.

On the other hand, he flagrantly violates one of the cardinal rules of broadcasting. At the opening of the show, the studio audience appears to be in paroxysms of laughter at something or other. A lot of monkeyshines are under way on stage, I expect, but this is never explained. Later a singer named Jack Owens serenades the women in the audience. I guess he passes among them with a microphone, because the act provokes maniacal laughter from the audience, but this too is never explained. It's fun in the studio but not much fun at home.

Oh, yes, there's one other detail about the McNeill show that should not be omitted. Directly after a commercial for Swift cleanser, there is a moment of prayer for "a world at work and a world at peace." Bands, singers, audience participants, jokes, all this and evangelism, too. I tell you it can't miss.

Arthur V. Wiebel Gets New Position

Arthur V. Wiebel, son of J. Vance Wiebel, Pittsburgh, a nephew of Grant, Charles and Frank Wiebel, all of Cumberland, has been appointed vice-president in charge of operations of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company with headquarters in Birmingham, Ala.

Wiebel, a graduate of Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, recently went to Birmingham from Pittsburgh where he was assistant to the vice-president in engineering and operations of the United States Steel Corporation of Delaware.

In 1933 Wiebel joined United States Steel, as an estimator in the Engineering Department of the Carnegie-Illinois Corporation's Youngstown, Ohio, plant. After occupying positions of responsibility in engineering and operations he became chief engineer for the corporation in the Pittsburgh District in 1940 and later the same year was promoted to assistant vice-president in engineering and operations of the Corporation of Delaware.

During the war Wiebel served as an executive consultant to the director of the Steel Division of the War Production Board in Washington.

Wiebel was born in Cumberland and left here about 25 years ago when his family moved to Pittsburgh.

Adequate Number Of Doctors Here

There are enough physicians in Cumberland and vicinity to adequately care for the population at the present time, Dr. A. J. Mirkin, president of the Allegheny-Garrett County Medical Association, stated over the weekend, adding that eight physicians have established practices here since the close of the Second World War.

Dr. Mirkin declared there is a shortage of hospital beds for acute cases, estimated in some quarters at 150, and despite expansion at the County Home on Valley Road, there is a 300 per cent shortage of beds for chronic cases. According to Dr. Mirkin local physicians can handle approximately 370 patients at a time.

Advice To The Lovelorn

Girl Advised To Make Friends In A More Conventional Way

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been meeting a certain fellow often at the movies but have never met him on the street. I have grown to like him very much, and he also likes me. I am afraid that if I met him on the street he would change his attitude towards me. What is the best thing to do?

"BEWILDERED"

In the first place, don't you think it is rather a poor idea to pick up boys at the movies? It is true that nice people are occasionally met in unconventional ways, but it seems to me that, if this boy were the kind who would make a good friend, he would by this time have suggested coming to your home and taking you out in the proper way. He would hardly be content to go on simply meeting you in this haphazard fashion.

I certainly cannot see why you should think he would like you on the street than in the movies anyhow. You would have to explain this a little more fully than you have done before I would see any sense to it.

In the meantime, I suggest that you wait until you see signs of wanting to make your relationship more conventional before worrying about the thing one way or another.

Gossip Broke Up Friendship

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 20 and, after living a very active social life without finding any one man I cared about particularly, I finally met one who cared for a lot. He is 25 years old and has all the characteristics I would want in a man. We just clicked from the start.

Then, because of some gossip, we drifted apart, and while we have everything settled now and have fun again, that "certain something" we had before is missing. When we meet at dances, or other places, I know he wants to be with me, but his friends come up and, before I know it, they have me to themselves. He is very sensitive and goes off and sits by himself, or joins another crowd and leaves early, and he ignores me for the rest of the evening. I don't want to run after him or let anyone know how I feel, so I pretend I am having a swell time.

How can I get him to ask me to go out again? Shall I play along and hope for a change, or shall I forget him?

"PERPLEXED"

Neither friendship nor affection can be forced. If either of them does not happen spontaneously between two people, there is nothing you can do about it.

You don't say what sort of gossip it was that caused the difference between the two of you, and, if you had told me, perhaps that would give me a clue as to what the trouble might be now. It may be, however, that when you meet this boy at dances and other places, you don't give him enough chance to pay attention to you, but accept the first advances from these other friends.

Why don't you try inviting him over to your house some night and see if he will accept the invitation? If he does, it will show that he wants to let bygones be bygones and take up his former friendship with you again. If he declines your invitation, then you had better take the hint, stop thinking about him and concentrate on your other friends.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and married to a serviceman 21 years old. We loved each other from the time we met and were married two months later. At first we were very happy, but I soon found out that he was very jealous. He was even jealous of my girl friends. He has been away for four months now and his parents wrote and told him that I was going around with other men. He believed it, although I have been true to my husband. It is true that I talk to my men friends sometimes and perhaps have a coke at the drugstore with them, but I love my husband and he is all I want.

He wants me to ask for a divorce, but why should I when I love him and have not done anything wrong?

"A SOLDIER'S WIFE"

Dear "Soldier's Wife":

Are you quite certain that you have never done anything, while your husband was away, to give his parents grounds for suspecting your loyalty to him? It is perfectly true, of course, that some husbands are so jealous that their suspicions are aroused with little or no reason, but, at the same time, it seems a little strange that his parents would make up stories about you.

Your husband can't force you to divorce him, and he would have to prove that you had been unfaithful to him in order to get a divorce for himself. Unless he is overseas, isn't there some way that you could be nearer him, where he could be with you when he was away from his post? Why don't you suggest that to him and see if you can't persuade him that you really want to be with him? If this is impossible, then I suggest that you be very careful in all your actions not to give anyone any reason to criticize or to pass on to your husband unfavorable accounts of your behavior.

ALL THE GIMMICKS

One thing may be said about Don McNeill, toastmaster of the Breakfast Club, (A. B. C. 9 a. m. EDT, Mondays through Fridays): He doesn't give anything away on his program, not even an orchid. The audience participants get a warm handshake and go away apparently satisfied. Apart from that, however, Mr. McNeill has taxed his program with just about every gimmick known to broadcasting. He offers his listeners a band, a couple of singers, comedy (or what passes for comedy), interviews with minor celebrities and sometimes major ones, and—best of all—little chats with Mrs. Sarah Bittendorfer from Duluth, who is 85 years old and has been listening to the Breakfast Club since it started.

That's the real gimmick. The listener might someday get on the show sooner or later. A great many of McNeill's listeners get to Chicago where the show originates, and if they write a few weeks in advance, they will get a free ticket. The chances of being invited up to the microphone aren't very great, but a girl can hope, can't she? And if she succeeds, what a delightful surprise to the children, and Cousin Abner and Mrs. Mason who lives next door, all of them listening anxiously back in Albuquerque. And even if she doesn't, if she only attends chances are she will listen to the show the rest of her life. Since McNeill has been on the air for years he's built up a large and extraordinarily loyal audience that will stick with him, presumably forever.

To provide a few details, in case you never heard the Breakfast Club, which is unlikely, the show is composed roughly of two parts: applause and laughter from the audience, one part music and jokes, and one part interviews with Aunt Agnes from Dubuque or George Jesse from Hollywood. It would be difficult to find so many commercials tucked into a single hour in any other network show. McNeill has sold his program to four sponsors and each one indulges in three commercials in addition to a couple of seconds of national product during his quarter-hour. Many of the jokes between McNeill and his cast or his audience participants lead right into a plug for Lustre Cream Shampoo or possibly Prem.

The part the audience participants play in this program is fortunately small. McNeill asks the ladies—they're usually elderly women—where they come from, when they are going back and if they have had a nice trip. As I remarked earlier, some of this leads right into a commercial. A 19-year-old boy who boasted that his was the finest head of hair in Dixie was asked what caused this magnificent growth. "Lustre Cream Shampoo," he said obligingly.

"Do you go to the movies?" inquired Mr. McNeill.

"Sure would." The conversation hair in Dixie.

"Ever see Martha Stewart?"

"Sure."

"Like to meet her?"

"Sure would." The conversation sometimes gets brighter than this, but not much.

"Well, there she is," said Mr. McNeill.

The finest head of hair in Dixie said, "Hello."

"Well, you've done enough," said McNeill, not unkindly, "go back and sit down."

Incidentally, McNeill has a pleasant enough personality. He doesn't shout and his jokes, while not terribly funny, are amiable.

On the other hand, he flagrantly violates one of the cardinal rules of broadcasting. At the opening of the show, the studio audience appears to be in paroxysms of laughter at something or other. Manager Norman Gerdeman's Cumberland Amvets took over undisputed possession of first place in the Bi-State Baseball League by trouncing the Hynoman (Pa.) Firemen yesterday in the Pennsylvania town by the score of 11 to 2 while Mt. Savage provided one of the biggest surprises of the season by defeating Westvaco at its home field to the tune of 6 to 2.

The Amvets jumped on Henry Salyan, Hynoman's starting pitcher for 12 hits in five innings, and Joe Geatz drove him to cover in the sixth when he belted a homer over the left field fence after Norman Gerdeman had hit a triple. The Amvets boosted their total for the day to 16 by nipping Johnny Walman for four in the last four heats.

While the Amvets were fattening their batting averages, Kenneth "Shake" Clark, an outfielder-turned-pitcher, was limiting the home team to seven scattered bingles. In fact, "Shake" pitched no-run, no-hit ball until one down in the fifth when Fred Porter singled to left. Bob Cook obtained two of Hynoman's safeties.

Crump Tames Westvaco
Bob Crump, youthful stopper, assisted the Amvets into first place, when he let the high powered Westvaco Club down with six hits while his mates hopped on Davis for nine hits and six runs in five innings. Bill See came upon the scene in the 6th and pitched hitless and runless ball the rest of the route.

Joe Nolan, Cassidy and Walters shared six of Mt. Savage's nine hits. Mt. Savage got its runs in pairs, scoring twice in the first, fourth and fifth stanzas.

The Romney Rockets sprang a surprise when they hung it on the Republican Club tossers at Lonaconing to the tune of 17 to 9. Twenty-eight hits were chalked up for the game, 15 by Romney and 13 by the home team. Woodson, Romney centerfielder, featured by throwing out "Babe" Johnson at the plate on two occasions. Johnson and Frye were the heavy hitters with four safeties each. One of "Babe's" hits was a homer with one aboard in the eighth.

Frostburg Gets 16 Hits
Frostburg's V. F. W. swatmen went on the warpath and trounced the Midland Red Sox in the Mountain City by the score of 17-9. The winners chalked up 16 hits. Doctor I. Q. Show Moves Up Hour To 9:30 Fast Time

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

 First at 6 p. m., two 15-minuteers are being consolidated to give Robert Q. Lewis a half-hour Mondays through Fridays for another comedy series, to be in addition to his Friday Little show. The idea, he says, will be "human humor" in an informal style. The programs he replaces for the vacation period are Mystery of the Week and Jack Smith's songs.
 At 8 the network is putting in two half-hour dramas for the absent-for-vacation Radio Guild. The

Negro Bell Man At Hotel Drowns In South Branch

Friends Recover Body Of Richard Gilmore

Richard Huntley "Jack" Gilmore, 46-year-old negro bell man at the Algonquin Hotel, drowned in the South Branch at Indian Rock, across from Green Spring, W. Va., yesterday morning a few minutes after he dived into the river from a row boat.

Dr. J. F. Easton, Romney, W. Va., physician, said Gilmore died of accidental drowning. He said he was told that Gilmore called to some of his companions that he could not "make it" while swimming in the riffles.

Gilmore and a number of companions left early yesterday morning for the South Branch on a camping trip, members of the family said, and several of them, including Gilmore, started boating a short time before noon.

Good Swimmer
Not far from shore, Gilmore dived into the river, swam a few yards and then called for help, his family said, adding that they are unaware of what happened because he was a "good" swimmer.

As men in the boat turned toward him, an oar broke and they were unable to make much headway against the current until someone on the bank tossed out a pole.

Gilmore was hauled into the boat by a friend, Alfred Edmondson, Ridgeley, W. Va., and, once on shore, was given artificial respiration, authorities said.

When he failed to respond, he was carried to an automobile to be taken to Fort Ashby where firemen used a pulmotor in a futile effort to revive him. However, the trip was delayed for some time when the car developed a flat tire en route to Fort Ashby.

Dr. Easton said he was told Gilmore was floating on his back just before he drowned. He said it is not likely he suffered a heart attack and pointed out that some water was gotten out of his lungs.

Cpl. R. R. Karkickoff, of the West Virginia State Police conducted an investigation.

Praised During Fire
Born at Piedmont, W. Va., Gilmore was a son of the late Emma Jones and William Gilmore. He worked at the Algonquin Hotel for a number of years and at the time of the recent Algonquin Hotel fire was praised by the management for his aid in assisting residents to the street. He also worked at one time as a doorman at the Port Cumberland Hotel. He was a member of St. Phillips Episcopal Chapel.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Helen Gertrude Cooper Redmond; two sons, Richard, Jr., and William; and three daughters, Misses Helen Regina, Betty Lee and Lois Ann Gilmore, this city.

Other survivors are a brother, James A. Gilmore, Piedmont; and four sisters, Mrs. Nyanza Perry, Piedmont; Mrs. Thelma Lee Gilmore, New York; Miss Van Della Gilmore and Mrs. Novella Montgomery, both of Cumberland.

The body will remain at Stein's Chapel.

Bowling Green Joins County Fire Association

Donation For Group Will Be Asked

The new volunteer fire department which is being organized in Bowling Green was officially admitted to membership in the Allegheny-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association at the last Friday's meeting in Lonaconing.

Plans were made to send a delegation to the Board of County Commissioners meeting tomorrow morning at the Court House to ask for a donation to aid the Bowling Green company in securing equipment, pending the next session of the General Assembly.

Two years ago the minimum legislative appropriation for a volunteer fire company was raised from $400 to $575.

Acceptance of the Bowling Green company's application for membership raises the number of member companies to 27. The Elerslie Volunteer Fire Company was admitted to the association several months ago.

A special meeting will be held Friday evening following the Firemen's Night parade in Lonaconing, to discuss rates for county insurance for firemen.

Delegates from the association made plans to attend the first of four annual executive meetings of the state association, to be held July 12 and 13 at the island home of Eugene J. C. Raney, chairman of the state board of trustees, in the Severn River near Annapolis.

Those to attend are John Pritchard, Grantsville, a member of the state board of trustees; Harry C. Walters, Corrigansville, second vice president; Cromwell C. Zembower, LaVale; Frank C. Ori, Midland; William A. Wilson, Midland, treasurer; Harry C. Wilson, Baltimore Pike; Joseph Wenrich and Chief Harland Lasher of Cresaptown, and Nelson W. Russler of the Cumberland Hose Company.

Appropriations for various committees will be discussed, as well as recommendations made to the executive committee at the recent state convention in Frostburg.

Wenrich was named chairman of a committee to make plans for the annual volunteer firemen's picnic, to be held August 24 at Smouse's Beach.

Rev. Walter D. Mehring, pastor of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church, Frostburg, was named chaplain for the association at the Frostburg convention, assumed his duties at yesterday's meeting.

The next meeting of the county association will be held Sunday, August 3, in Frostburg.

City Police Probe Series Of Thefts

City Police were continuing their investigation last night into four cases of breaking and entering that occurred between 1 and 3 a. m. Friday after the theft of an automobile owned by Seymour W. Jenkins, 910 Lafayette Avenue, from in front of his home on Bunny's Billard.

Truaders, 239 Virginia Avenue, and approximately $134 from a safe. At the Green Fern lunch room, 528 Virginia Avenue, the culprits climbed through the transom of a rear door and took cigars valued at $15 and two cartons of cigarettes.

Several cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Mayflower Tavern, 23 Front Street, which was entered through a rear window.

Nothing was reported missing at the grocery store of Henry V. Courtney, 913 Maryland Avenue, where would-be intruders pulled a screen door loose and broke the glass in a door. Hirsch Brothers Tannery, 109 Cumberland Street, was not entered but culprits tried to enter by molding around a door.

Papers taken from the pool room and cigars from the Green Fern were found in the automobile which was recovered later on the South End Playground.

Beall Hopes Dam
Will Be Completed

While no funds are included in the 1947-48 United States budget for completion of the Savage River Dam flood control project, strong efforts are being made for inclusion of appropriations for the work in the fiscal year budget of 1948-49, which begins next July 1, according to Rep. J. Glenn Beall.

Rep. Beall said the President's indication that funds are not to be included in the 1947 budget or the so-called 1948 budget does not mean that allowances will not be made next year.

Up until last June, Rep. Beall said, the project was under the Public Works Administration but now, on recommendation of Army engineers, it is definitely a flood control project and money will be appropriated for that purpose. The project was authorized by the 79th Congress.

Six Persons Hurt In Collision On Baltimore Avenue

Two Cars Crash On Sharp Turn

Six of seven occupants of two automobiles were injured, none believed seriously, when they crashed together at the sharp turn on Baltimore Avenue just west of Long Hill about 7 o'clock last night.

City Police, who investigated, said five persons were riding in the automobile headed toward Uniontown and that four of them were injured. Two persons were riding in the east-bound machine.

Officers said no charges have been filed against the driver of either car. They listed the driver of the east-bound car as Steve Petro, RFD 3, Berlin, Pa., and of the westbound car as David Ansel, RFD 4, Uniontown, Pa.

His wife, Mrs. Nora Ansel, 46, suffered a laceration of the left temple and a fractured ankle. She also was admitted to Allegheny Hospital.

Ansel's brother, Ralph, 40, sustained several fractured ribs, lacerations of the left knee, nose and face, and he likewise was admitted. A half brother, Merl Ansel, apparently escaped injury, attaches said.

Dolly Ansel, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ansel, was admitted for treatment of abrasions of the face, arms and left elbow.

Steve Petro, 23, suffered a large laceration of the left knee but was not admitted.

His sister, Elsie Petro, 19, was treated for abrasions of both knees, a puncture wound behind the right ear and a laceration of the lip, but she was not admitted.

Officers investigating the accident included John G. Powers and J. Carl Stouffer.

Others treated in Allegheny Hospital yesterday were Bonnie L. Vogel, 2½, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vogel, Route 2, Baltimore Pike, who fell while playing and lacerated her right knee, and Wilbert Michaels, 38, Wellersburg, Pa., who was treated for a burned right hand and forearm.

Allegany County farm crops, aided by recent days of warm weather, are showing signs of a better yield than was at first expected, according to Ralph McHenry, county agent.

Wheat crops, which cover approximately 2,300 acres of farming land in the county, if present weather conditions continue, will be well above average, McHenry said, but he would not estimate the yield in figures.

The cold weather of early spring has also given the oat crop a good start, the county agent explained, adding the yield in this county is expected to be well up with the national average.

Corn crops, which are planted in approximately 4,600 acres of county soil, now give promise of a good yield after a poor start because of the unseasonably cold weather. A good settled rain at this time would be very beneficial to the crop, McHenry said.

A good rain would also result in an above average early potato crop, McHenry declared. The crop, he said, has looked good all season, with the tops still remaining green, indicating that the tubers, (potatoes) are only now beginning to set.

Truck crops, including green peas, beans, lettuce, tomatoes, and other fresh vegetables, are about two weeks late, according to the county agent, but the present warm weather has given new hope to potato crops that yields will be good to good late.

An extended dry spell or sudden cold snap, however, would just about ruin the truck crops, McHenry said.

Cold weather of early spring delayed planting of the crops, and then unseasonable weather caused the plants to progress very slowly, McHenry explained, adding that any further interference would prevent the crop from maturing before autumn frosts came.

Hay and pasture have been averaging up to this period, permitting good grazing for dairy and livestock, one of the leading farm industries in the area, McHenry said.

However, the Japanese beetle, which earlier was considered a minor pest this year has begun to bite boring to the top of the soil and will present a serious problem to crops unless farmers take advantage of known remedies, McHenry added.

Plans will be made for a demonstration to be held at the annual picnic of the county volunteer firemen's association August 24 at Smouse's Beach. Reports will be given on the water relay demonstration and on the meeting of the Maryland Fire Chiefs Association at the state convention held recently in Frostburg.

Members, line officers and interested persons were urged to attend Wednesday's meeting.

Eyerma Retires After 30 Years As Police Chief

Good, Settled Rain, Needed Agent Asserts

An order complying with a request of Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerma, who had been retired as of today will be introduced at this morning's meeting of the Mayor and City Council, according to William V. Keegan, commissioner of police and fire.

Keegan confirmed a report that Eyerma, who completed 30 years as police chief here last Wednesday, had submitted a letter to him requesting his retirement. Keegan said he will present the letter to the Council.

Commissioner Keegan, explaining that his official relations with Chief Eyerma had extended only over a little more than a year, paid tribute to the retiring police head as "competent, level headed, co-operative and understanding. There has never been any discord in our co-operative efforts to keep Cumberland as nearly free from crime as possible."

Eyerma became Chief of Police July 2, 1917, resigning as Commissioner of Police and Fire to succeed W. Ralph Young.

First elected to City Council in 1914, where his father, George Eyerma, served a term in the early Nineties, he spent two years as Commissioner of Streets and Public Property. It was under his direction that Baltimore Street was repaved, overhead wires and wooden poles eliminated and the "Great White Way" lighting system first installed. He had the first concrete base for paving put down, and in co-operation with Mayor Thomas W. Koon began the repaving program that contributed largely to Cumberland's modernization. He directed the building of Market Street bridge. He also advocated open sessions of council and won his point, beginning with the first session when the newly elected City Fathers were called to order April 7, 1914, to make appointments.

Re-elected in 1916 by a larger majority than in 1914, Eyerma was put in charge of the police and fire departments. He and Mayor Koon were the only members of the previous administration re-elected to office. Improvements were begun at once under the vigorous leadership of Commissioner (then only 36 years old). When Chief Young resigned in 1917, Eyerma took the civil service examination and on July 2 resigned as Commissioner and began the city's longest term as head of the Cumberland police department.

As near as can be ascertained his term of service is exceeded by two other chiefs in U. S. cities over 25,000 population.

Eyerma's service has covered the local repercussions of two world wars; a major depression; two "hunger" marches of the unemployed with stops in Cumberland; several strikes that involved semi-rural conditions; the Prohibition era of speakeasies and attendant law violations; three major floods, and a complete revamping of the police department. The city's population has doubled during his incumbency.

Recent Warm Days Will Raise Yield Of County Crops

Good, Settled Rain, Needed Agent Asserts

Allegheny County farm crops, aided by recent days of warm weather, are showing signs of a better yield than was at first expected, according to Ralph McHenry, county agent.

Wheat crops, which cover approximately 2,300 acres of farming land in the county if present weather conditions continue, will be well above average, McHenry said, but he would not estimate the yield in figures.

The cold weather of early spring has also given the oat crop a good start, the county agent explained, adding the yield in this county is expected to be well up with the national average.

Corn crops, which are planted in approximately 4,600 acres of county soil now give promise of a good yield, after a poor start because of the unseasonably cold weather. A good settled rain at this time would be very beneficial to the crop, McHenry said.

A good rain would also result in an above average early potato crop, McHenry declared. The crop, he said, has looked good all season, with the tops still remaining green, indicating that the tubers, (potatoes) are only now beginning to set.

Truck crops, including green peas, beans, lettuce, tomatoes, and other fresh vegetables, are about two weeks late, according to the county agent, but the present warm weather has given new hope to farmers that yields will be good though late. An extended dry spell or sudden cold snap, however, would just about ruin the truck crops, McHenry said.

Cold weather of early spring delayed planting of the crops, and then unseasonable weather caused the plants to progress very slowly, McHenry explained, adding that any further interference would prevent the crop from maturing before autumn frosts came.

Hay and pasture have been averaging up to this period, permitting good grazing for dairy and livestock, one of the leading farm industries in the area, McHenry said.

However, the Japanese beetle, which earlier was considered a minor pest this year has begun a late boring to the top of the soil and will present a serious problem to the planting of the crops, and a charge of false pretense in connection with passing a worthless check. Authorities said they were told by other prisoners that he fell over backward and struck his head on the concrete. Baughman was reported "frothing at the mouth and shaking" just before he fell.

Information received from Parsons High School and attended Davis and Elkins College. After teaching for a short time he became a photographer.

He was a son of Claude and Sophia Frederick Baughman, Parsons. Other survivors are his widow, Mrs. Katherine Burgess Baughman, Bluefield, W. Va., and three children, Robert E., Jr., 8, and Robert E., Jr., 8.

Eyerman Retires After 30 Years As Police Chief

Good, Settled Rain, Needed Agent Asserts

An order complying with a request of Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman, 67, that he be retired as of today will be introduced at this morning's meeting of the Mayor and City Council, according to William V. Keegan, commissioner of police at five.

Keegan confirmed a report that Eyerman, who completed 30 years as police chief here last Wednesday, had submitted a letter to him requesting retirement. Keegan said he will present the letter to the Council.

Commissioner Keegan, explaining that his official relations with Chief Eyerman had extended only over a little more than a year, paid tribute to the retiring police head as "competent, level headed, co-operative and understanding. There has never been any discord in our co-operative efforts to keep Cumberland beginning with the first session when the newly elected City Fathers were called to order April 7, 1914, to make appointments.

Re-elected in 1916 by a larger majority than in 1914, Eyerman was put in charge of the police and fire departments. He and Mayor Koon were the only members of the previous administration returned to office. Improvements were begun at once under the vigorous young Commissioner (then only 36 years old). When Chief Young resigned in 1917, Eyerman took the civil service examination and began the city's longest term as head of the Cumberland police department.

As near as can be ascertained his term of service is exceeded by only two other chiefs in U. S. cities over 25,000 population.

Eyerman's service has covered the local repercussions of two world wars; a major depression; the "hunger" marches of the unemployed with steps in Cumberland; several strikes that involved semiriotous conditions; the Prohibition era of speakeasies and attendant law violations; three major floods and a complete revamping of the police department. The city's population has doubled during his incumbency.

Moscow Man Held As Hit-Run Driver After Accident

Coal Miner Hurt At Westernport

Arrested two and a half hours after a hit-run accident in Westernport, a 37-year-old coal miner, Roderic R. Dorn, Westernport, was struck and injured while standing on the pavement at the corner of Main and Washington Streets, police reported.

Taken to Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, W. Va., by Officer Earl Hawk in Westernport's emergency car, Rose was admitted for treatment of contusions and abrasions of his back. While the full extent of his injuries had not been determined last night, his condition was reported to be satisfactory.

Chief of Police Burza Hanlin, of Westernport, said Warnick told him he was flicking the ashes from a cigarette while rounding a corner at the intersection where Rose was struck.

Hanlin said that before climbing the curb and hitting Rose, the car struck a pole, damaging both doors on the right side of the sedan.

Trooper A. M. Spich, of the State Police, arrested Warnick on Vine Street about 2:30 a. m. yesterday. He was released later on $500 bond pending the hearing Saturday, according to Trooper Spich.

PASTOR EXPLAINS POSITION OF CHURCH ON AMUSEMENT CENTER

Rev. Charles E. Shaw, pastor of Park Place Methodist Church, Narrows Park, said in a letter to the board of the church that neither he nor the official board of the church are reconsidering their action in protesting use of Narrows Park as an amusement center.

W. E. Mueller, of Paw Paw, who has obtained a lease to operate an amusement center at the park, said last week that the church board did not take any action at a meeting last Wednesday, and announced he would open the park on July 12.

"Let there be any misunderstanding," Rev. Mr. Shaw wrote, "I wish to state that neither the official board of the Park Place Methodist Church nor the pastor of that church are reconsidering, or approving that Narrows Park be used as an amusement center."

"The action taken by the official board at its meeting last Wednesday night was that if the amusement center is not operated on Sunday and there are not objectionable features, the church will take no action at this time."

The members of this church and other people living in the vicinity of the park and at Park Heights have a perfect right to protest if they believe this project will disturb the peace and quiet of their residential section and have a tendency to depreciate the value of their properties."
